Fat Envelope Contained Stunning Gift

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

It was a pretty fat envelope that came to the Colonist the other day, but, since it was addressed just to the paper, the woman in the mail office put it through the automatic letter-opener along with all the others.

When it came out the other side, opened, she noticed there was another envelope in it marked simply, 500 Fund.

She took the envelope out. She removed the contents — $500 in crisp $20 bills.

There was no name, and no marking other than that of the fund.

It's almost enough to make you believe in Santa Claus. In fact, we're wondering if that jolly old elf didn't make an advance visit to Victoria to drop this off in the mailbox.

Whoever did it has given a wonderful Christmas present to destitute families.

They'll be able to enjoy a turkey,

have a Christmas tree, or give presents to each other.

For a large number too, it will mean they'll be able to buy some of the basics. New shoes for the kids, a jacket with warm lining for winter, some extra groceries.

Christmas could be bleak for many people this year. More people have been laid off, and young people just entering the labor market are having a tough time getting steady work.

Welfare officials have told the Colonist that there are almost 2,000 people who could really use some extra help this Christmas, let alone $500.

Whoever gave that $500, thank you very much. It's greatly needed and greatly appreciated.

Contributions, large or small, will help Victoria's underprivileged to have a Merry Christmas.

New guillotine for tax debate sharpened by divided foes

OTTAWA (CP) — The government reached into its bag of rules Wednesday and came up with House Rule 75-C to close off debate on its massive tax bill.

House leader Allan Rock told the Commons the rule, which he said he intends to invoke today, would allow only four further days of detailed clause-by-clause study of the bill.

He also was careful to point out that the rule he was invoking was not closure — which is House Rule 33.

Even so, 75-C may be more stringent in its effect. Under 75-C, the government may specifically designate how much time may be spent completing any one stage of a bill's passage.

Under Rule 33, or closure, time-limit regulations are built in and the rule must be invoked repeatedly for each separate segment of a bill.

Rule 33 also can be invoked unilaterally by the government on 24-hour notice while 75-C is the third stage of a series of closely-defined attempts at agreement between the various Commons parties. It cannot be brought in until these attempts have been exhausted.

The Conservatives immediately charged that the government pulled a driver out of its rules bag when a light iron would do just as well.

ernment opted for the powerful 75-C.

After Wednesday, only third and final reading — generally a formality — would be necessary.

MacEachen's notice of the government's intention to feed off a 40-minute debate. But those arguments really served to emphasize the divided opposition opinions that paved the way for the government's first use of 75-C.

Generally, the opposition parties let the talk-limiting guillotine go through without much fuss.

But late in the afternoon, some Conservatives staged a House invasion from behind the curtains, storming the chamber and demanding an immediate vote for an adjournment of debate about an hour ahead of the regular time.

Prosper Boulanger (L. — Montreal, Quebec), in the chair, took an opposition raking when he allowed Revenue Minister Herb Gray to rise on

By JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Reporter

The provincial government has put a 6.5 per cent ceiling on wage and salary increases that hospitals may give their employees, it was learned Wednesday.

Spokesmen for Local 180, Hospital Employees' Union, and the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., which now are negotiating new contracts, said government intervention makes a mockery of collective bargaining.

"Our organization was caught by surprise," said Ray McCready, executive secretary of HEU. "We will prepare ourselves for a fight — and it will be the government that will turn our hospitals into a battlefield in the fight against inflation."

The government, which pays 100 per cent of the day-to-day costs of public hospitals, made its position known about one month before the existing union contracts expire.

The 6.5 per cent ceiling is identical to that which Education Minister Donald Brocks has asked school boards to follow in negotiations with teachers.

B.C.'s hospitals employ about 23,000 persons. The wage and salary bill this year likely will be close to $160 million.

A. S. Lightfoot of Campbell River, president of the B.C. Hospitals Association, told the Colonist hospitals spend public funds and if 6.5 per cent is

LONDON (AP) — With series of "blame" and "bloody disgraceful" leaping from packed opposition benches, the Commons approved Wednesday night the Conservative government's propoals for settlement of the six-year rebellion of white-ruled Rhodesia.

Just before the House voted 297 to 269 after heated debate, Prime Minister Ian Smith of the breakaway colony told British television viewers that political advancement by the Rhodesian non-white majority would depend on the way the majority acquitted itself.

He said in an interview broadcast from Salisbury he did not think the blacks were in a position to govern the country at the moment and added:

"What the position will be in 100 or 1,000 years' time I do not know and it is not easy to predict."

To loud protests from the Opposition, Britain's attorney-general, Sir Peter Rowlson, told the Commons the settlement proposals "now provide for advance to parity and beyond" for the Africans.

On television, Smith said he had a "pretty good idea" the blacks would not be in control in 10 years' time.

NDP, Grits Draw In Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — The major political parties in Saskatchewan failed to gain any ground in two byelections Wednesday.

Liberal Jack Weibe, 35, a farmer from Herbert, led all the way in Morse, a south-central riding that was made vacant when Thatcher died July 23, a month after the Liberal party was defeated.

Weibe defeated Ed Nassen, 52, of Saskatoon, the province's Progressive Conservative party leader, and the NDP's Jim Murdoch, 33, a farmer.

In a two-way fight in Souris-Estevan, New Democrat Kim Thorson, a 39-year-old lawyer from Estevan, defeated Liberal Ian MacDougall, a 43-year-old pipeline company executive, also of Estevan, who had held the seat before the June 23 general election.

Woman's Indian Act Fight

Rights Case to High Court

OTTAWA (CP) — The first case in which the Canadian Bill of Rights has been used to fight discrimination against women will go to the Supreme Court of Canada, Justice Minister John Turner announced Wednesday.

Indian Affairs Minister

Jean Chretien said later "radical changes" in the administration of Indian affairs will result if the Supreme Court upholds a Federal Court decision on which the test is based.

The decision overthrows a marriage provision in the Indian Act on the grounds that it is discriminatory against women.

The Commons announcement that it will be tested in the Supreme Court was taken by Conservative spokesmen as an attempt to break the Federal Court judgment.

Indians themselves have been sharply divided on whether or not women should lose their treaty rights, as is the case now, when they marry non-Indians.

Chretien was asked whether the judgment, if upheld, would have a retroactive effect on the hundreds of Indian women who have lost their equity in reserve funds, and their right to live on the reserve or be treated as treaty Indians because they have violated the marriage provision. The provision has been aimed at protecting the reserve lands from domination by non-Indians.

'What Wrong Has B.C. Done?'

Nishga Hearing Opens in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia is "an innocent bystander" in the aboriginal rights battle between the federal government and non-treaty Indians, the Supreme Court of Canada was told Wednesday.

"What wrong has British Columbia done ... in carrying out the scheme of Confederation?" asked Douglas McKay Brown, appearing in court for the attorney-general of the province.

He is opposing an appeal by the Nishga Indians who are asking the high court for a declaration that they hold Indian title — aboriginal rights — in more than 4,000 square miles of the Nass Valley north of Prince Rupert.

Brown said the Nishga quarrel is with the federal government and that the courts had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

But Mr. Justice Emmett Hall disagreed. He said the federal government seemed to be telling the Indians first to prove their claims of aboriginal rights before talking about compensation for the lands involved.

Only after they had proved a claim to Indian title in B.C. Crown lands whose title was held by the province could they press their claims, said Hall.

The court also seemed unimpressed by Brown's argument that a declaration that the Nishgas owned the land in question would be of nuisance value only.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence observed that Brown should be more concerned that it could be too effective.

Tom Berger of Vancouver, appearing for the Indians, has said that Indian title to the Nass Valley was "not inconsistent" with crown ownership.

He also has stressed that the Indians are not claiming damages in the action against B.C. They only wanted to establish that their aboriginal title was still valid.

Brown said the Indians could not go to the Land Registry Office in B.C. and file a claim for the land since it now was registered in the name of the crown.

a point of order. Conservatives yelled that this was just a ploy to delay the vote and allow the Liberals to muster the troops. They threw papers and chanted furiously.

Under parliamentary rules, a member may not enter the Commons chamber after a motion has been put calling for a vote.

The opposition finally won the point, the vote was called and they took it 44 to 42.

Standing in the House: Liberals 150, Conservative 71, NDP 25, Social Credit 13, Independent Liberal 1, Independent 2, Vacant 2.

That was the last opposition gap for the day.

With a new tax year starting Jan. 1, the Liberal want the bill through the Commons and Senate by that time.

Its provisions to increase basic personal income tax exemptions were approved by all parties, the only complaints being that they could have gone even higher.

But the Conservatives, New Democrats and Social Credit MPs found themselves at odds on other provisions — the tax on capital gains, easements for resource industries and treatment of small businesses and corporations.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield urged the government to split the bill, putting forward only the provisions for higher basic income tax exemptions, the tax write-off for day-care payments by families with working mothers and new allowances for work-related expenses.

The refusal convinced Adrienne Lambert (SC — Bellechasse), as he said Wednesday, that even though he thought it a good idea it was "useless to hope for this."

The Liberals were split with an "arrogant" label after using the existing debate-limiting closure rule during the 1966 pipeline debate that toppled the Louis St. Laurent government.

They were targets for similar criticism when Lester Pearson used it to shut off the flag debate in 1955. They wanted a rule that would leave them less open to an "off-with-their-heads" image.

The solution they proposed was 75-A, B and C.

Rule A provided for a time limit on debate under unanimous agreement of all parties. The 75-B rule provided for a time limit to be adopted the government's guidelines they will have to follow it.

Hospital officials recalled their experience of 18 months ago, when the government unexpectedly announced that it would pay only 70 per cent of wage increases that went into effect when the current contracts started on Jan. 1, 1970.

As a result, hospitals had to either reduce staff or find the money elsewhere in the budgets to make up the remaining 30 per cent of negotiated increases.

The Registered Nurses Association of B.C., which represents about 5,500 nurses employed by hospitals, has been bargaining all week with the hospitals' association for a new contract.

When the news of the 6.5 per cent ceiling was relayed to them Wednesday evening, members of the

RNABC's bargaining committee went into caucus to study the development.

"We are extremely dismayed and consider it most unfortunate that B.C. Hospital Insurance Service has chosen to impose a clear mandate on hospitals regarding their 1972 budgets," said Nora Paton, director of the RNABC's personnel services.

"We believe this action is clearly an infringement of free collective bargaining which in the past has existed between the nurses and the hospitals association," she added.

"This mandate appears to have completely changed the rules under which we and the association have been working."

The other major group of hospital workers, HEU, represents approximately 9,000 employees.

McCready noted that hospitals have refused to discuss economic clauses of the new contract and he speculated that they knew the provincial government was preparing its mandate on wage and salary increases.

He said members of HEU themselves are victims of inflation. It was impossible for a man to support his wife and family on $400 a month, which is the salary of many hospital workers, he said.

In addition to asking for more money and shorter hours, HEU also was seeking clauses that would give hospital patients a feeling of security. One such clause, said McCready, would require a minimum of three lay persons on duty shifts for every 40 patients.

McCready said such clauses were the only way to guarantee safe standards of hospital care in this province.

cent ceiling will be employer contributions to certain, but not all, fringe benefits. For example, one exclusion will be the unemployment insurance benefits, to which employers and employees will equally contribute.

Under new federal legislation, hospital employees for the first time next year will participate in that fund.

One hospital spokesman said that about two weeks ago BCHHS circulated a memorandum that outlined how it wanted 1972 budgets prepared. There was no mention at that time of a ceiling on wages and salaries.

The addendum to the memorandum started arriving in the mail of hospital administrators and hospital board chairmen on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Cautious Sharp:

Ottawa Hopeful, Dissatisfied Over Rhodesia

OTTAWA (CP) — Britain's plan for bringing legal independence to Rhodesia falls short of satisfying the Canadian government, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday.

But in a cautious statement to the Commons, Sharp expressed hope that some of the plan's potential shortcomings will be overcome and that the will of the black Rhodesian majority will be satisfied.

The scheme was made public last week by Sir Alec Douglas-Home, Britain's foreign affairs minister, who said it would move Rhodesia toward majority rule and racial equality.

Some critics have estimated that its terms would effectively put off majority rule for 65 or more years.

U.S. Dollar Weakens In Europe

LONDON (AP) — The United States dollar weakened on European exchanges Wednesday as top non-Communist finance ministers discussed devaluation of the U.S. money within a general realignment of currency values.

The dollar's downward drift was an indication of the nervous state of Europe's currency markets as finance ministers of the Group of 10 richest non-Communist nations were striving in Rome to end the international monetary crisis.

The Canadian government position also was outlined in the Senate by Senator Paul Martin, government leader, and prompted a comment from Senator O'Leary (PC-Ontario) that the government has been guilty of hypocrisy in its stand on the Rhodesian issue.

Sharp's hesitant hopefulness was shared by Heath Macquarrie, Conservative external affairs critic.

Andrew Brewin, NDP external affairs critic, called Sharp's statement "vague and ambiguous."

He said the British plan is unsatisfactory, and urged the government to express grave reservations about it.

Gilbert Rondeau (SC-Shefford), who visited Rhodesia last summer, said it is a myth that whites are running the country on the backs of blacks.

There are five million blacks and 250,000 whites in Rhodesia. The country's parliament is composed of 50 whites and 16 blacks.

Sharp said that, no matter what the misgivings of Canadians, Canada cannot substitute its judgment for the judgment of the Rhodesian people on the acceptability of terms of independence.

Rhodesia declared unilateral independence from Britain in 1965, and the two countries have been negotiating its legalization ever since.

Bursitis Needs Rest

By G. C. THOSTERSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosterson: Will you give me information on tennis elbow? I cannot bend my arms up without having pain, or in any other ways I use them. I have had this for two years from over-use of my arms.

The doctor has given me shots, and surgery has been suggested. I am wondering if surgery will cure it. Or will it just relieve the pain?—L.M.

Tennis elbow is one form of bursitis, which goes by various names depending on which joint is afflicted.

A bursa is a fluid-filled sac in a joint, provided by nature so the tendons can ride over it smoothly and easily.

Subjected to too much strain or too much pressure, the bursa becomes inflamed, swollen and very tender. In your third sentence you say that the trouble developed from over-use of your arms, and I have no doubt that is quite true.

Yet your letter implies that you are not giving those painful elbows the thing they need most: rest from the strain.

I've pointed this out in prior columns. An inflamed bursa needs, more than anything else, a chance to rest from strain and pressure, a chance for the inflammation and swelling to subside.

Injections of hydrocortisone sometimes relieve the pain temporarily, while the healing process begins — but you have to give the bursa an opportunity to heal.

This sometimes can be hastened by using a hollow needle to withdraw excess fluid from a bursa. Ultrasound treatments sometimes help.

In severe cases, surgery may be necessary.

But all of these can only help the healing process. They cannot do the whole job. And that's exactly the point patients are prone to forget. Rest is of prime importance.

The application of heat (whether wet or dry heat is of little significance) will also help in subduing the inflammation and relieving pain. So start giving your tender elbows what they need. If you say that you can't give them rest and time to heal, then I must ask this important question: If you have surgery, aren't you going to have to let the arms rest anyway?

Bend your arms as little as possible. Put as little strain on them as you can. Wrap them with hot towels. And see if that, in addition to what your doctor can do for you, won't begin to make some difference.

Expecting "shots" or anything else to cure it all, while you keep on subjecting the joints to strain, is asking too much.

ment be extracted from the province, he said.

Brown also cautioned the judges about "the inherent dangers" of declaring a Nishga interest in the Nass Valley. Although the request "appears innocent on its face," a clear definition would be needed to define that interest.

The judges also didn't appear to buy Brown's argument that aboriginal rights must be spelled out in legislation or given recognition by the executive branch of government before the courts could deal with such rights.

Beaten Hopeful Cries 'Fraud'

MONTEVIDEO (UPI) — The runner-up in Sunday's Uruguayan presidential elections charged Wednesday that the apparent victory of government candidate Juan Maria Bordaberry was based on a "gigantic fraud." He called on the armed forces to "intervene."

Opposition Blanco party candidate Wilson Ferreira Aldunate accused the interior minister of rigging the vote and said that "votes from the interior were deliberately mixed with those of Montevideo" to produce what he said were false results.

Interior Minister Danilo Sena immediately denied the charges.

With only 13 of Montevideo's 2,744 voting precincts still to be tabulated, Bordaberry held a slim but steady lead of 10,652 votes over Ferreira.

A final vote count was not expected until Friday.

The latest official total gave Bordaberry 593,000 votes to Ferreira's 582,248.

Political climate in the aftermath of the hotly-contested election rose several degrees as Aldunate levelled his blast. Thousands of his supporters took to the streets chanting "Sena, thief. Sena, thief."

Astronaut Blasts Space Budget Cut

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Astronaut Alan B. Shepard complained Wednesday that the United States was not spending enough money on space exploration and said if it spent more than 42 cents of every tax dollar it now spends for social services "we would become a socialist state."

He said the U.S. was spending only 1.4 cents of every dollar on the space program.

Ex-Nun Accused Of Charity Racket

Spicy Time Assured

BURNLEY, England (CP) — Lancashire sailor Kevin Earnshaw, who plans to make a solo rowing trip to South Africa, has chosen a drastic way to rid himself of a mania for curried foods — he will eat nothing else during his 6,000-mile voyage.

Shepard, a public member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations General Assembly, told a news briefing, "space is here to stay, just like aviation."

He said he could "say a lot of bad things" about the recent cutbacks in the space budget. "Somehow the idea got around that the U.S. should be spending more money on social services rather than space exploration."

Tuesday night and charged with fraud, misappropriation of donations, employment of minors, and the use of violence and threats.

She is accused of founding a fictitious religious order and a charitable institution about 10 years ago, with its headquarters at a secluded Rome villa which she bought for a reported $80,000 in 1961.

Miss Ravasio allegedly sent orphan and "nun" traveling round Italy begging from companies and state agencies on behalf of her order. The money then went into her own pocket.

Children and "sisters" at the institution were sometimes beaten by Miss Ravasio, and were forced to live in impoverished conditions during their journeys round the country, the charges claim.

Israelis, Palestinians Clash in Gaza

Arab Guerrillas Slain

TEL AVIV (UPI) — A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said Israeli troops killed six Arab guerrillas who tried to shoot their way out of an underground bunker in a refugee camp in the occupied Gaza strip Wednesday. It brought to 11 the total of Arab guerrillas slain in clashes in the strip in the past 48 hours.

In Amman, King Hussein, who has been having his problems with the Palestinian guerrillas, told parliament Jordan must mobilize all its resources to fight against Israel until occupied Arab territory is returned.

Heavy security precautions were in effect following reports that four assassins of Premier Wafsi Tell in Cairo Sunday also planned to kill the king and his family.

Hussein's speech to the opening session of parliament echoed recent statements by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Hafez Assad of Syria that war is inevitable unless Israel pledges to withdraw completely from Arab land captured in the 1967 war. Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir, in Washington for talks Thursday with President Nixon, told newsmen on her arrival Tuesday she is concerned there may be fighting but does not fear the outcome if shooting should start. Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon said in Tel Aviv the visit to Washington by Mrs. Meir, in which she is expected to appeal for more Phantom jet war planes, was one of the "greatest missions a statesman has ever undertaken."

The UN General Assembly in New York is scheduled to open debate on the Middle East on Thursday. In a report Wednesday to the assembly and the Security Council, UN Secretary-General Thant urged "appropriate organs" of this world body to take steps to enable his Middle East peace envoy Gunnar V. Jarring to resume his mission. Jarring's efforts to find a peaceful solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict was suspended last March.

Accident Claims Rise After Storm

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's government-run car insurance plan ended its first month of operation Wednesday with the number of claims higher than officials expected.

Ed Turner, claim centre manager, said 6,850 claims had been accepted, and attributed the high figure to a storm that struck near the start of November.

He said that since the storm, most troubles at the claim centre office have been ironed out and the claims are being handled quickly. To date, 450 cheques have been issued on claims.

Turner said there were several minor problems in the first weeks of the operation because the staff was unfamiliar with computer equipment used to process claims.

A Need for Get Up and Go

IT'S NOT ENOUGH to organize campaigns designed to "get out the vote" in municipal elections — something, incidentally, which seems to have fallen by the wayside in the Greater Victoria area. More than that is required, obviously. There have been good performances, numerically speaking, on occasion. But some new tactics need to be tried to bring out greater interest in the formation of civic governments.

That there is something wrong about the municipal elections process showed up glaringly at the mid-day closing of nominations last Monday for this year's voting. Something like 12 mayoralty, aldermanic, school and regional boards seats from Ladysmith south were uncontested. They included three chief magistrate's posts in the Victoria-Sidney region. In the Township of Esquimalt the whole caboodle, mayor and three aldermen, are unchallenged.

It is possible that the people of the areas in which offices are filled by incumbent acclamation are satisfied with the handling of their affairs. But that does not mean a more effective job can't be done, which most ratepayers must realize.

But how can public office candidates be enlisted? This is the big stickler in a system where party politics play no part. Perhaps this is the answer?

Ratepayers' organizations sometimes are instrumental in bringing out office seekers, and expansion of their activities might be more acceptable, although they too have vested interests.

At least in a party politics situation the voters probably would be given a better rundown on the background and views of the persons whose names are on the ballot.

This would appear to be a major fault in the present process. Not enough is made known about candidates.

Civic governments themselves might consider spending public funds to right this. If the payers of taxes saw their own money going into the organizing and promoting of information meetings it should stimulate an interest that appears to be dormant now in municipal elections — not only in the voting, but in the encouragement of individuals to stand for office.

There should be stress, too, on the importance of exercising the franchise in civic-sponsored drives to be instituted at least a month before the polling and continuing to deadline day.

It could result in a feeling for a need to protect an investment, more or less. If a portion of tax money was set aside in annual budgets to try to blow the December elections out of the doldrums.

Heedless Leader of State

MEN WITHOUT THE SPECIAL KNOWLEDGE Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau pretends to possess, will wonder how it is possible for him to brush aside the facts and refuse to accept the estimate of the Economic Council of Canada that 1.4 million new jobs are needed before 1975 to keep unemployment at a tolerable level.

The council warns that all these new jobs must be found just to keep unemployment below 4 per cent of the labor force. And the council is a sober body of sensible men not prone either to exaggeration or unwarranted alarms.

There are currently in excess of 447,000 persons out of work in this country, 13,000 more than a month ago, and this in spite of the fact of a sharp increase in the gross national product. But the number of workers with jobs rose in this brief period from 8.19 to 8.25 million.

It is therefore clear that the rate of increase in the labor force is outstripping the jobs' growth.

The bureau of statistics puts it this way: the unemployed represented (at 447,000) 5.1 per cent of the total labor force of 8.7 million as against 5 per cent a year ago.

The seasonally adjusted rate, accepted by most economists as the truer representation of the situation, dropped to 6.7 per cent in October from September's unusual peak of 7.1 per cent. But while this was an improvement it is hardly significant, and the total of jobless is still very far from the point of tolerance accepted by most economists.

Yet this is the situation that is going to persist unless, as the Economic Council has demonstrated, Canada does something to stimulate business and industry in order to afford enough work for the increasing labor force. But Mr. Trudeau is content. He proposes no remedial measures beyond winter works. He denies the validity of the conclusion of the government's own statisticians.

He will hardly dare deny the distressing disclosure by Dun and Bradstreet of Canada Ltd. that in the first 10 months of this year 2,184 Canadian companies went into bankruptcy with liabilities of $290 million.

Only a fool would refuse to heed the Economic Council's advice that the annual rate of growth in the economy must be more than 6 per cent to match that of the labor force.

Moreover, says the council, the nation cannot count upon foreign demand for Canadian products for the quick and massive stimulation required.

It is from the national government a lead must come if this nation is to escape the treadmill of unemployment and inflation. And it is alarming in view of this very evident necessity that Mr. Trudeau persists in his refusal to listen to economic advisers or even to accept the facts of inflation and an unacceptable level of unemployment.

Pollution Problem for Russia

Trying to Rescue the Deepest Lake

By DEV MURARKA from Moscow

LAKE BAIKAL is a magic name. Nobody can miss Baikal and claim he has seen Siberia. It is the biggest sweet water lake in Asia and the deepest in the world. Now this natural treasure is threatened in the cause of industrial advance. Factories are polluting it, killing off unique plant and fish life.

A decree of the Communist Party and the Soviet government has been issued for special measures to protect the lake, but conservation steps will take a long time to show results and in the meantime other sources and causes of destruction will multiply.

For those to whom Lake Baikal is simply a name, or a blue crescent on the vast map of the Soviet Union, its gigantic size comes as a surprise. Nearly 400 miles long, it stores more than 23,000 cubic kilometres of water, compared with which the average annual flow of the mighty Volga is a trickle of only 251 cubic kilometres. But its water is not, of course, inexhaustible. Soviet scientists have calculated that no more than 60 cubic kilometres can be used each year, representing the annual inflow from 336 tributary rivers several of which make the only substantial break in the mountain ranges that fringe Baikal and end as deltas in the lake.

Even if the pollution is stemmed, Soviet scientists insist that the main accumulation of water should remain untouched because to use it would mean destroying plant and animal life, a good deal of it unique. Of the 1,700 species of flora and fauna identified at Baikal, 1,083 are not found anywhere else in the world.

The Lake Baikal basin is also valuable for its timber resources estimated at 2,000 million cubic metres. Some of it is ripe and over-ripe. A scientific program of felling is essential as a measure of conservation.

The main emphasis for the time being, however, is on setting up compulsory purification devices at all plants by the side of the lake or by the side of rivers which flow into the lake. It is an expensive task and factory managers will go on finding excuses not to implement it as long as possible.

One important aspect of preventing water pollution is to stop drifting vast quantities of timber on the rivers. This is partly necessitated by the two main enterprises on Lake Baikal, the Baikal pulp plant and the pulp and cardboard plant on the Selenga. Drifting makes rivers and the lake shallower with sunken trees, and they clog and foul the water.

Siberian larch—drifted in large quantities when drifted. The decree provides for an end to drifting and for cleaning up river beds.

Instead of drifting, about 1,000 kilometres of roads have been built, and a further 600 kilometres are planned. All timber-drifting should come to an end by 1975. By this deadline the river beds are also supposed to be cleaned up.

To prevent further water pollution on the lake, the Selenga pulp and cardboard mill's commissioning has been delayed till a water-purifying plant has been installed there.

Soviet scientists point out that the ultimate solution for most water pollution problems is to have a system of closed water supply in which the water can be used again and again. It will ease the pressure on water resources. But suitable methods and machinery for this purpose are still to be found and for the time being purification of water before being discharged in water systems is the only viable alternative.

While much effort is being made to restore to Lake Baikal its pristine purity, plans are also afoot to turn the Baikal basin into a major tourist area. Five natural parks are envisaged, able to cater for 2,300,000 tourists annually. Human nature being what it is, it will be impossible to prevent depredations in hitherto near-virgin natural surroundings. No voice seems to have been raised against creating tourist facilities on such a scale. This is surprising because long before the authorities woke up to the danger to Lake Baikal, the scientific community and the intelligentsia generally campaigned for years to draw attention to it. A notable role in this was played by the Literary Gazette, which kept on publishing authoritative material about the damage being done to the lake and by that most unlovable of all establishment literary figures, Sholokhov, who never lost an opportunity publicly to lambaste those concerned with the upkeep of the Baikal region.

So far, the Warsaw treaty has not been ratified by West Germany. Brandt's position remains that ratification by the Bundestag can take place only when a "satisfactory" Berlin settlement has been reached, and the talks between the two German states, which must be completed before the four-power agreement on West Berlin can be finally signed and sealed, are dragging on interminably. The Poles now reckon that the treaty will not be ratified until next year, probably in the first three months of 1972, but they let it be understood that once the Bundestag has approved the treaty, full diplomatic relations between Bonn and Warsaw could be established at once.

Adam Willman, the Polish deputy foreign minister who visited Bonn a few weeks ago, said that "full normalization" of relations could begin only when the treaty had been ratified. But, in fact, contacts have already improved. No less than 25,000 West Germans visited Poland so far

The Auditor General

From The Edmonton Journal

GERALD BALDWIN, Conservative House leader, claims that the federal government is again likely to try to discredit the auditor-general.

If so, the government is being stupid as well as delinquent. The auditor-general scrutinizes government expenditure and comments on what he considers any waste or extravagance. In these days of increasingly powerful governments spending vast sums, he is a unique and valuable watchdog on behalf of the public. Where the ordinary citizen finds it difficult to penetrate the maze of government finance, the auditor-general can deploy his professional expertise and tell the public of matters that should be ventilated.

This was the pattern last year when ministers attacked Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson because of his outspoken criticisms. A government move to curb his powers misfired and the bill had to be withdrawn. Ever since, it has seemed as if the government has nourished resentment. Now it is reported the government has rejected a plan to strengthen his office and has not acted on a recommendation of the Commons public accounts committee to revise salaries in his department. It is further said that ministers intend to try to diffuse and deflect criticisms in his report.

The government should cease and desist. Its attitude is petty and mischievous. If it succeeded in reducing the effectiveness of the auditor-general this would constitute a major injury to the public interest. In attempting it, the government is inviting the public once more to administer the rebuke the government suffered when caught in the act last year.

If the government cannot move to strengthen the auditor-general's position, it should at least keep its hands off this sentinel who stands guard on the public interest.

Washington Calling

President Nixon's Impacts on Japan

By MARQUIS CHILDS from Tokyo

THE Nixon shock No. 1, recorded on Japan's political earthquake scale, was the announcement of the presidential visit to Peking. Shock No. 2 one month later was the Nixon New Economic Policy. For a people long dependent on the United States in both trade and diplomacy it is hard to say which was the greater blow.

Japanese official reaction to the Peking visit is curiously ambivalent. On the one hand, it is taken as a betrayal of a relationship of trust and confidence. Like a bolt of lightning the Nixon announcement ended 25 years of cooperation that had been particularly close regarding China.

On the other hand, as Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda put it in an interview with this reporter, the Nixon initiative means the beginning of a dialogue which has been sadly lacking in Asia. In Europe, where the NATO powers confront the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact nations, there has long been a dialogue. Now the United States and the People's Republic of China are opening a path beyond confrontation and containment.

But Fukuda, too, weighs the consequences as well as the pros. Japan was bypassed with a shock to the political life of the country, felt even within his own Liberal-Democratic party. The foreign minister, widely believed to be the next prime minister when Eisaku Sato steps down, spoke of the "communique issued in Washington just two years ago, when Sato conferred with them [the Chinese] to maintain the closest cooperation on every diplomatic front."

To the opposition, and even within the Liberal Democratic party, as Fukuda pointed out, this looked like American betrayal of Japan in "dual diplomacy." It was a deal, with Communist China joining in collusion to try to oppress Japan's economic strength. The leftists were given still another reason for the violent demonstrations rocking this capital coincidental with ratification by the Diet of the Okinawa treaty granting the United States bases and 50,000 troops on the island after the Japanese take-over.

On the Nixon economic policy, Fukuda said he recognized that the United States had to take such measures to protect the dollar and correct the imbalance of trade. Without American stability there can be no stability anywhere in the world.

When I visited the European countries with the Emperor on his recent journey," Fukuda said, "I told them that if the economy becomes worse and stagnation results we must all share the consequences. I was acting as a special envoy without pay for your government."

The danger, as the foreign minister sees it, is that if the process is long drawn out, other nations will take countermeasures to match the American surcharge of 10 per cent. Denmark has already imposed a surcharge. If the economy deteriorates the world will face a tragedy like that of the 1930s when protectionism initiated by the United States touched off a worldwide depression.

While Fukuda declined to say whether U.S.-Japanese talks on the economic crisis were progressing, he expressed optimism about the atmosphere. This was because the textile dispute was resolved, the Okinawa treaty ratified by an overwhelming vote in the U.S. Senate, and Japan had joined the United States in co-sponsoring the resolution in the United Nations to keep Taiwan in the General Assembly.

The conflict over the surcharge, which has already cast a shadow over Japan's flourishing economy, should be resolved not later than next March. If it is prolonged beyond that deadline the American presidential campaign will have begun in earnest and it will be impossible to keep the issue of protectionism out of partisan debate.

The visitor cannot but feel, however, that the Japanese industrial drive is so powerful, the habit of work and discipline so ingrained that the economy can survive even the 10 per cent levy. China is a far greater preoccupation. As Fukuda says, Japan has been a close neighbor of China for 2,000 years and a way must be found to renew a relationship broken off when the Japanese invaded China in the late '30s.

No matter how much or how little comes out of the Nixon visit, nothing in Asia, or for that matter the world, will be the same. It may be, as some bitter critics have called it, a surrender to Communist power. But it is the overwhelming event of the last third of a tumultuous century.

The North America Act was passed by the British Parliament 22 years ago today — in 1849 — empowering the Canadian Parliament to amend the "British North America Act" (the Canadian constitution).

The Canadian Parliament passed a motion requesting this action Oct. 27, 1949.

1959 — A dam burst in the Frejus area of southern France, claiming more than 300 lives.

1954 — United States President Dwight Eisenhower rejected a proposal to blockade Communist China, saying it would be an act of war.

1914 — The Austrians captured Belgrade.

1905 — The central building of the University of Ottawa was destroyed by fire.

Acute Hostility Fading

Poland, West Germany More Amiable

By NEAL ASCHERSON

IT is a year since Chancellor Willy Brandt knelt at the monument to the Warsaw Ghetto, and signed the treaty with Poland which finally admitted that the lost German lands east of the Oder and Neisse rivers had become Polish territory. In these first 12 months, relations between these two countries, once so hostile, have steadily improved.

So far, the Warsaw treaty has not been ratified by West Germany. Brandt's position remains that ratification by the Bundestag can take place only when a "satisfactory" Berlin settlement has been reached, and the talks between the two German states, which must be completed before the four-power agreement on West Berlin can be finally signed and sealed, are dragging on interminably. The Poles now reckon that the treaty will not be ratified until next year, probably in the first three months of 1972, but they let it be understood that once the Bundestag has approved the treaty, full diplomatic relations between Bonn and Warsaw could be established at once.

Adam Willman, the Polish deputy foreign minister who visited Bonn a few weeks ago, said that "full normalization" of relations could begin only when the treaty had been ratified. But, in fact, contacts have already improved. No less than 25,000 West Germans visited Poland so far this year, and youth exchanges ran at four times the level of 1970. The Poles welcome this, although some young West Germans pose problems: one Cracow journalist recently objected to over-emotional characters who embarrassed Poles with their "mystical spirit of self-sacrifice" — an exaggeration on the right side — and also to what he called "hurrh-revolutionaries" of the extreme Left who went round telling the Poles that they did not understand what real socialism was.

It is economic links which most interest the Poles. Trade has not developed much: after increasing by 23 per cent last year, exports from Poland to West Germany and vice versa stagnated in 1971 and hardly grew at all. This is disappointing, as West Germany has now replaced Britain as Poland's main trading partner in the West. The Poles complain that although Poland is a member of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), West Germany has not given her the normal treatment between GATT partners by scaling down the quota limits on the various categories of Polish imports.

And there is the worrying question of trade agreements. The Poles, like all East Europeans, look with dread towards the year 1974, when the Common Market authorities in Brussels are due to take over all trade agreements with Eastern Europe collectively, ending the possibilities of making individual bilateral deals with Western European countries. The trade agreement signed with West Germany last year runs out in 1973, and so far the Poles have not been able to get the West Germans to give them any long-term assurances which would allow them to plan their trade for at least five years ahead.

The other main problem is the question of transferring the German population resident in Poland to West Germany. When the treaty was signed Poland declared that this would be arranged, and if the present rate of granting visas is kept up, some 30,000 ethnic Germans will have left Poland by the end of the year. The Bonn government says that it is quite satisfied with this, but the Christian Democratic opposition, and the conservative press in West Germany, have begun to complain.

Dr. Kurt Wagner of the German Red Cross recently arrived in Warsaw to discuss the problem. The government in Bonn seems to accept a figure of some 250,000 Germans in Poland, who might wish to emigrate. The opposition alleges that the Poles will only admit to harboring 30,000 Germans entitled — through family connections in the West — to leave, that compensation payments are being demanded for emigrants who are graduates, and that no less than 150,000 applications are stuck in the pipeline largely through the obstruction of local authorities in Poland. One Christian Democrat deputy in the Bundestag has actually accused the Poles of breaking "assurances given in connection with the Warsaw treaty."

These complaints are exaggerated. But they annoy the Poles. Although the Warsaw press now writes about West Germany with considerable fairness and objectivity, the daily newspaper Zycie Warszawy attacked German journalists who kept demanding concessions from Poland before the treaty was ratified: great generosity, considering in reality Poland had showed that real "normalization" was not supposed to start until the ratification was complete.

In a way, such disagreements show how much softer the mutual climate has become. When one recalls that only two years ago Poland was habitually referring to West Germany as the main plotter against world peace, while West Germany's official position was that Poland was the illegal occupier of German territory, these tensions about trade and resettlement assume their proper proportions.

Does Brandt Deserve Nobel Peace Prize?

By JOSEF KORBEL
Professor of International Studies, University of Denver

The award of the Nobel Peace Prize to Willy Brandt raises the question as to whether the committee that bestowed this coveted recognition has been influenced by political motivations or whether the West German chancellor has indeed proved to be the architect of a more lasting peace in Europe.

In fact, the actions of statesmen can finally be judged only by history, and it is history which reminds us of another German statesman, Gustav Stresemann, who received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1926.

Stresemann was then celebrated as a great European peacemaker, but it was only after the war that captured German archives, in particular his "Nachlass," revealed the true character of this German nationalist.

He was a cunning, even brilliant operator of European political forces, pitting European power one against the other and using them to the optimal advantage of German international goals.

Pleading for peace and disarmament, he at the same time endorsed the German general staff's secret deal on military cooperation with the Soviet Union; he exchanged secret views with the Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, G. V. Chicherin, about "pushing Poland back with her geographic boundary," and after having signed the Locarno Treaty, for which he subsequently received the Nobel Peace Prize, he confided to his personal papers, "I never thought more about the East than during the time I was looking for an understanding with the West."

These motives, devious moves and goals were, of course, unknown to the Nobel Peace Prize committee, and he was awarded their supreme recognition.

Willy Brandt

It should be strongly emphasized that this historical reminiscence is not meant to invite an analogy about Willy Brandt. It only suggests that qualities of a statesman can be judged after the whole story is known and in particular after the consequences of his efforts become evident and open to a detached evaluation.

To all appearances, Brandt is profoundly dedicated to the cause of peace and entirely honest in his endeavors to bring about a détente in Europe. Nevertheless, the fundamental concern here is the perennial problem of international politics: the durability of his oestpolitik. For what appears to be a remarkable success today may prove to be a disaster tomorrow.

Europeans have talked for 10 years about détente. However, since the principal obstacle to a real détente is the problem of Germany, the policy of the Bonn government is crucial to an overall relaxation of tensions.

Brandt's bold moves in seeking a reconciliation with Moscow and Warsaw, in recognizing the existence of "two German states of one nation" and his acquiescence in the concessions made by the United States, Great Britain and France in the vexing problem of West Berlin have led to an entirely new situation in Europe.

However, the important question is, What are the real intentions of Moscow and what are Brandt's perceptions of these intentions? The ultimate answer, which can only emerge in the years to come, will determine whether Brandt has been an architect of peace or has sown the seeds of critical confrontation.

Some of Moscow's intentions are fairly obvious. Besides the efforts to create in Europe for the time being an atmosphere of pacification so that it can focus its political and military strength on China, the Soviet Union wants to consolidate, through the policy of détente, its hold over its allies in Eastern Europe and may apply if necessary (without the risk of Western countermeasures) the Brezhnev doctrine of military intervention in other communist countries. This is a policy of détente based on oppression of other nations.

Even more important to the cause of peace, the Soviet government pursues a policy of détente to eliminate, or at least weaken, American presence in Western Europe, to paralyze NATO and sow mistrust among its members.

The rapprochement with West Germany is meant to serve these goals, and considering the realities of international politics, these aims are from the point of view of Soviet foreign policy perfectly understandable and natural, but they hardly serve the cause of peace.

There is nothing to indicate that Brandt is unaware of Soviet intentions, but he appears confident that the risks are not too great and that the West can maintain its position of solidarity. Accumulated evidence of the past, however, discourages these expectations: More frequently than not, the mutual loyalty and cohesion of democratic countries has crumbled under the pressure of totalitarian states. Thus, it may happen that Brandt's oestpolitik may yet in the long run create problems more difficult than the ones he is attempting to solve.

It's tricky business evaluating a statesman's efforts without the yardstick of history. An honest mistake may be as catastrophic as malicious intent, and in the cause of lasting peace there are no A's for effort.

Aristide Briand, who shared with Stresemann the Nobel Peace Prize, was acutely sensitive to this dimension of his own peace efforts when he modestly and insistently stated 45 years ago that "history will say whether we deserved" the distinguished honor.

Europe Ripe for Britain's 'Balance of Power' Role

Quote!

By Robert S. Elegant
From London

A fanciful cartoonist could probably best express the impact of coming British entry on the European economic community — and on a world in which the Common Market is already a massive economic force, though its political power lags behind.

He might show the ghost of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, dressed as Paul Revere, riding across the European countryside crying: "The Redcoats are coming! The Redcoats are coming!"

The Common Market is at present a basically comfortable — if intermittently feuding — agglomeration of six continental European nations which are intensely concerned, first, with self-enrichment and, second, with mutual enrichment — but with little else.

Although the British enter with the best intentions, they will disrupt that comfortable association radically. Under ostentatiously tough-minded Prime Minister Edward Heath, the British expect more of the Common Market than the present glorified customs union which expresses vague hopes someday of doing something about social and environmental problems.

In part because they are in a weak competitive position with regard to the continental Europeans, the British conceive of the enlarged Common Market in much more ambitious terms.

They consider a more closely co-ordinated defence effort a necessity as the inevitability of American withdrawal becomes ever more clear.

They are also anxious to accelerate movement toward the political integration — and, ultimately, the political unification — of all Western Europe.

Britain could exert much greater political than economic influence because of her imperial experience abroad, her functioning democracy at home — so unlike most continental nations — and her genius for compromise.

The British impact on the present costly commercial Common Market could, therefore, have three major effects which are not necessarily consistent with each other.

With good fortune, Europe could begin to break out of the present stalemate and really begin moving toward some form of political unification.

Alternately, the Common Market, enlarged to 10 with the addition of Britain, Ireland, Norway and Denmark, could split into sharply contending blocs.

Finally and most likely, the new pattern of Europe could resemble the centuries-old "balance of power" by which Britain cast her weight first with one continental power and then with another.

The first possibility, for some time to come, is the least likely. The second and third, which shade into each other, are, therefore, worthy of immediate attention.

Entente Cordiale Now the Real Thing

By DAVID LAWDAY, from Paris

The entente cordiale between France and Britain is blossoming again after years of coolness — and the French are saying that this time it's the real thing.

The entente is the love part of the love-hate relationship which has marked ties between the two European powers since the Middle Ages. The political winds have often shifted across the 30 miles of water separating the countries.

Students of history point out that the present warm understanding — growing out of agreement on British entry into the European Common Market — is the 10th entente cordiale since the first flowered briefly four and a half centuries ago.

The first was sumptuous and wine-soaked. It was inaugurated by Britain's King Henry VIII and France's Francois I, who embraced on the Field of Cloth of Gold near Calais, then a British enclave, in 1520. The two monarchs went on a royal binge, jousting and drinking for a fortnight. But the entente soon disintegrated amid intensive jockeying for power in Europe.

Few of the elements of the first entente are present in the new reconciliation except that royalty will again be playing a role and that jockeying for position remains a factor. Queen Elizabeth II is due to make a state visit to Paris in May to set the royal seal on the new spirit of warmth which has replaced a decade of friction and resentment in Franco-British relations. The visit has special value, as the citizens of the French republic are fascinated by kings and queens from other countries, particularly the royal family from across the Channel.

The Queen's visit crowns an agreement early last summer which dismantled the late General de Gaulle's policy of keeping Britain out of Europe and made it inevitable, short of a rejection by the House of Commons, that Britain would join the EECOM.

The agreement seemed almost a joint personal achievement by de Gaulle's successor, President Georges Pompidou, and British Prime Minister Edward Heath.

For their different reasons both found it preferable that Britain should come into Europe. London saw market membership as offering a promising way out of economic decline as well as political advantage. Paris saw it as a necessary step in building up Western Europe as a potent force, and also perhaps balancing out West German ascendancy.

It is still doubtful whether the people are as enthusiastic as their leaders. In one opinion poll, the British Marked down the French as dirty, dishonest and obsessed with sex. In turn there is a tendency among many Frenchmen to see the British as ignorant about Europe, lazy and arrogantly convinced that they are God's chosen children.

Insects Able To Thwart Any Man-Made Chemical

By GEORGE GETZE
From Los Angeles

Any chemical man can develop for the control of insects can be thwarted by the insects' ability to develop resistance, according to a Washington State University entomologist.

Robert Benson says insects apparently have an "infinite capability" of becoming resistant to chemical insecticides, even including the new agents, such as insect hormones, that prevent maturation and reproduction.

He said to solve the problem man may have to learn how to control the genes of the insect world. The only method so far developed to do this is to breed and release insects that are susceptible to poisons or diseases.

The method is called "gene infusion," Benson said. He reported some of his findings at the annual meeting of the Entomological Society of America, which was held here.

"Insects are able to use different mechanisms to develop resistance to nearly every biodegradable chemical insecticide man can produce," Benson said. Some insects can use more than one of these mechanisms.

For example, to counteract the effects of an insecticide some pests can slow the rate with which the poison penetrates their bodies.

They can do this in several ways — by storing poisonous chemicals in parts of the body where they do no damage, or very little; by producing extra amounts of enzymes that degrade the poisons, breaking down the poisonous elements before much damage is done.

Also by increasing the speed of excretion, and by learning to detect and avoid even the most minute amounts of poisonous chemicals.

Pesticides, Benson said, will probably continue to play an important part in the battle against insect pests. The use of natural predators and parasites to control pests cannot usually handle sudden outbreaks.

A practical method of gene infusion would allow the use of minimum amounts of relatively safe insecticides to guarantee high agricultural production and the least amount of damage to the environment, Benson said.

were progressing, he expressed optimism about the atmosphere. This was because the textile dispute was resolved, the Okinawa treaty ratified by an overwhelming vote in the U.S. Senate, and Japan had joined the United States in co-sponsoring the resolution in the United Nations to keep Taiwan in the General Assembly.

The conflict over the surcharge, which has already cost a shadow over Japan's flourishing economy, should be resolved not later than next March. If it is prolonged beyond that deadline the American presidential campaign will have begun in earnest and it will be impossible to keep the issue of protectionism out of partisan debate.

The visitor cannot but feel, however, that the Japanese industrial drive is so powerful, the habit of work and discipline so ingrained that the economy can survive even the 10 per cent levy. China is a far greater preoccupation. As Fukuda says, Japan has been a close neighbor of China for 2,000 years and a way must be found to renew a relationship broken off when the Japanese invaded China in the late '30s.

No matter how much or how little comes out of the Nixon visit, nothing in Asia, or for that matter the world, will be the same. It may be, as some bitter critics have called it, a surprise to Communist power. But it is the overwhelming event of the last third of a tumultuous century.

mans entitled — through family connections in the West — to leave, that compensation payments are being demanded for emigrants who are graduates, and that no less than 150,000 applications are stuck in the pipeline largely through the obstruction of local authorities in Poland. One Christian Democrat deputy in the Bundestag has actually accused the Poles of breaking "assurances given in connection with the Warsaw treaty."

These complaints are exaggerated. But they annoy the Poles. Although the Warsaw press now writes about West Germany with considerable fairness and objectivity, the daily newspaper Zycie Warszawy attacked German journalists who kept demanding concessions from Poland before the treaty was ratified; great generosity, considering in reality Poland had showed that real "normalization" was not supposed to start until the ratification was complete.

In a way, such disagreements show how much softer the mutual climate has become. When one recalls that only two years ago Poland was habitually referring to West Germany as the main plotter against world peace, while West Germany's official position was that Poland was the illegal occupier of German territory, these tensions about trade and resettlement assume their proper proportions.

Suspect Nabbed Victim Burned, Stabbed

HOUSTON (UPI) — A man already charged with igniting his bedridden stepfather's mattress was accused Tuesday of stabbing a woman 96 times in Chicago and then setting her on fire in the city's central park.

Larry Evert Palka, 30, an unemployed carpenter, was held Wednesday for extradition to Chicago. He talked freely about the bed fire and the killing of the Chicago woman Nov. 3.

"I remember choking her, but they said I stabbed her 96 times. Hell, I don't even know if I could move my hand 96 times for something like that," Palka said. Police said he doused her with gasoline and then set fire to the body.

He was arrested Nov. 15 and charged with arson in a fire at the Houston home of his mother, Mrs. Hazel Roberts Ross, 56. She said her son was upset because her husband Giles was bedridden with cancer.

"I was hoping he would have a heart attack or something," Palka said. "He's just been a drag on my mother. She wore herself down the last five years taking care of him. I stayed around until the fire department got there."

Mrs. Ross pulled her husband off the burning mattress and rolled him to safety in a wheelchair. Chicago authorities later spotted Palka in a routine check and began extradition proceedings.

Palka said he has been on drugs since he was 26.

Maple Leaf Stamp Sheet Has Error

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office said Wednesday it inadvertently issued and sold one sheet of the Maple Leaf In Autumn stamp which was printed without the words Canada, Autumn and Autumnne and the numeral 7.

The error apparently resulted, a spokesman said in an interview, when two sheets of stamps stuck together while being printed.

It is the second error made in printing the maple leaf series. A few sheets of the Maple Leaf In Spring stamp, issued April 14, were not fully perforated, and at least one sheet was sold.

One to four additional faulty sheets of 50 Maple Leaf In Autumn stamps may exist, the spokesman said.

Fishermen Feared Dead

LANGLEY, (CP) — Fishermen John Anthony Gabriel, 27, and David Piliardieu, 24, were missing and presumed drowned Tuesday after they failed to return from setting nets at the east end of McMillan Island in the Fraser River.

Otter Plan Still Alive

Death of an estima-1,000 sea otters near An-ka Island as a result of nuclear blast last month not likely to jeopardize the transplant program Vancouver Island, a fed-biologist said Wednesday.

Dr. Mike Bigg, of the aimo "biological" station, the Colonist he thought of could be transplanted to the Prince William Se-area of Alaska instead of Amchitka area.

Frank Jones, acting di-tor of the Alaska state g-division, said earlier transplants to Oregon, Wington, southeastern Ali-and B.C. would not take p-from Amchitka next sum-because of the effects of nuclear blast there.

But Bigg said that sh-not mean that otters cabe transplanted from Pr-William Sound where year's transplanted ani-came from.

The Sound, he said, is a 1,000 miles from Amchiand there has been no dence of any deaths of o-there.

The transplant progbegan in 1969 and continue 1970 with a total of 43 brought from Alaska to B.C. coast, particularly west coast of Vancouver land.

Bigg said it is not knhow many of the otters still alive, but there were confirmed sightings last s-mer, one of a mother wipup.

It is difficult to estimate numbers still alive, he s-because they have sp-themselves up and down coast, they are very diffto see much of the time, they are hard to distingfrom river otters unless are closely seen.

In Juneau, Alaska, J-said there is no evidence otters just moved away f-the Amchitka area and t-bodies were likely swept to sea.

Dr. Mike Bigg, of the Nanaimo biological station, told the Colonist he thought otters could be transplanted from the Prince William Sound area of Alaska instead of the Amchitka area.

Frank Jones, acting director of the Alaska state game division, said earlier that transplants to Oregon, Washington, southeastern Alaska and B.C. would not take place from Amchitka next summer because of the effects of the nuclear blast there.

An appeal for goodwill toward the handicapped has been issued.

Victoria's Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped, reminds Vancouver Island residents, handicapped persons should not be forgotten during the Christmas season.

"If this is to be the season of goodwill for the 170 employees of Goodwill Enterprises on the Island, there will have to be a dynamic increase in the donations of repairable household items and clothes for refurbishing in their workshops for the handicapped," a statement said.

"People do not think of hunting out these unwanted items (during the rush of the Christmas season) and as a result the stock of such articles is at a dangerously low level."

"Without a flow of donations in the immediate future, there will be no means of keeping up steady production," the statement said.

Goodwill said items needed include clothing, beds, wheeled toys, furniture and small appliances which can be overhauled in workshops and later sold in stores. Employment and wages for the handicapped result from the donations.

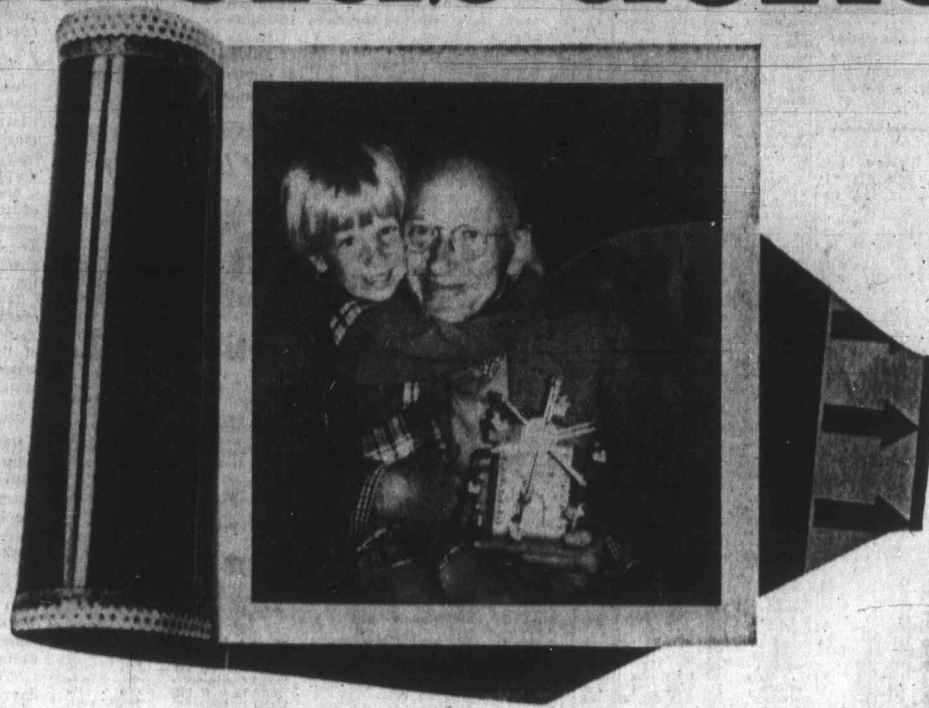

Donations can be left in Goodwill's blue and gold deposit boxes. Number to telephone for pick-up or larger items is 383-6791.

Canada-Peking Link Opening

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's International Telegraph and Telephone Co. announced Tuesday it would begin Dec. 1 to relay international telephone calls between the People's Republic of China and Canada.

The announcement said the service will conduct the relay at the request of the Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corp. and it will be made through an undersea cable or a communication satellite between Canada and Japan and through a short wave radio circuit between Japan and Peking.

Polaroid's done it.

New Year's Day.

Our new square color picture costs about the same as the pictures you wait days for from the film factory. (Check the list prices and see for yourself.)

But it's not a little less of anything.

Electric eye and electronic shutter for automatic exposures. Built-in flash for 4-shot flashcubes. Triplet lens for sharp pictures. Pack film for instant loading.

Color in a minute. Black-and-white in seconds.

CP-UPI

ROME — The United States has offered in theory to devalue the dollar by more than 5 per cent in a move to realign major western currencies.

West German finance Minister Karl Schiller said Wednesday.

Schiller said other member countries of the so-called group of 10, the non-Communist world's wealthiest nations, were "embarrassed" by the proposal and unable to give any prompt official response.

He said this was why the meeting of finance ministers Tuesday and Wednesday was adjourned until Dec. 17 and 18 in Washington.

"What has happened is that one country made a hypothetical offer which was bigger than some countries expected," Schiller told a news conference. "This has caused embarrassment to the others."

"Some other countries are not in a position to respond properly to this contribution to a monetary realignment," Schiller said. "A small number of countries are not yet in a position to come to terms with this larger-than-expected offer."

The West German made clear that he was referring to an offer made by the United States because he excluded Japan and West Germany both of which are expected by Washington to revalue their currencies upwards.

The other members of the "Ten" demanded at the meeting that America devalue the dollar by between 5 and 7 per cent in return for them either revaluing upwards or at least staying put.

France made it known, beforehand it would not be reluctant to maintain the present parity of the French franc in the event of any large dollar devaluation because this would make French exports to America more expensive while U.S. goods would be cheaper in France.

The West Europeans and Japan demanded dollar devaluation as part of a monetary realignment, refusing to merely revalue their money higher.

Conference officials said the United States discussed including the dollar in a realignment provided the others made sufficient concessions.

The Canadian dollar will play no part in a general realignment of major currencies in the 10 leading non-Communist countries, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said in Rome.

Benson said he had explained to ministers from the other countries that the Canadian dollar, floating near parity with U.S. currency since mid-1970, must be considered an exception because of the unusually close Canadian-American economic relationship.

There were mixed reactions among the ministers, he said. Some expressed sympathy while others felt "everyone must take part" in realignment.

Benson said he was confident that if agreement on currency realignment can be reached at the next meeting of the group in Washington Dec. 17 and 18 and if progress is achieved in trade matters, the U.S. would eliminate the venous 10-per-cent additional levy on dutiable imports.

Export Markets Lost

Apple Industry Probe Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Frank Welch (PC-Nova Scotia) called Wednesday for a royal commission to investigate Canada's ailing apple industry and castigated the government for lack of attention to the problem.

Senator Welch told the Senate that Canada's once-great apple industry is losing export markets. The domestic market was also being increasingly supplied by foreign apples and apple products.

The Canadian industry is "going down the drain fast," he said.

Orchards that once brought thousands of export dollars to Canada were being neglected. But the government, which was pouring millions of dollars into just about everything else, was doing nothing about this.

Senator Welch said U.S. apples are underselling Canadian apples in Canadian markets.

Last year, when Canada was having trouble disposing of its apples, the government permitted free imports of apples and apple products from Australia, New Zealand, France, South Africa, China and Japan, none of which would accept Canadian apples, he said.

For years Canadian apple-growers had been selling apples for use in apple products below production cost and, while European countries subsidized their growers Canada would not.

"The Canadian government is allowing them to use our country as a dumping ground while, in the meantime, this one-great industry is going bankrupt," he said.

Last year China and Japan each shipped more than one million pounds of canned apples to Canada, mainly into western Canada, but also into eastern markets.

Senator Welch also complained that solid-pack apples from China and Japan have virtually taken over the British Columbia market and "the import tide is rapidly moving eastward." Japanese solid-pack apples were being offered to Nova Scotia at "unrealistically low prices."

The Canadian duty of one cent a pound was totally inadequate to protect Canadian producers.

A total of 35 per cent of the apple juice made in Ontario was made from imported apple concentrate. Senator Welch described a recent grant from the regional expansion department to a Quebec knifewear firm as "interesting," since the textile industry in Canada had many features in common with the fruit industry, especially concerning competition from foreign countries with low-wage labor.

A grant of $58,000 had gone to a plant in Sherbrooke, Que., to modernize its carbonated beverage plant, creating an estimated two jobs. Much less money spent to support the fruit industry would pay off in far more jobs and, besides, apple juice was a much healthier drink.

Soviet Trade Pact Signed

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The $125 million exchange of metals for equipment between the Soviet Union and six United States companies will cover a three-year period, J. T. McKenna, president of U.S. Steel International, said Wednesday.

This single deal is worth more than one-quarter of all Soviet-U.S. trade over the last three years 1968-1970 which totalled $455 million.

It calls for the supply of American ore and oil extraction equipment, and certain other items, in exchange for Soviet non-ferrous metals. Informed sources said nickel is the main non-ferrous metal in the deal in which the Soviets will receive $60 million. Ara Oztimel, president of the Satra Corp. of New York who signed the contracts at the Soviet foreign trade ministry, said today the period covered by the agreement depended on how quickly the U.S. equipment manufacturers fulfilled their part of the deal.

The supply of Soviet metals would stretch over the same period as the delivery of American equipment, he said.

Among those who watched the signing was U.S. Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, who left for Warsaw today after a 12-day Soviet visit to "open doors" to more trade between the two countries.

Tanker Fouls Japan's Coast

NIIGATA, Japan (UPI) — An oil tanker pounded by Siberian winds split Tuesday and dumped thousands of tons of crude oil into Japan's coastal waters.

Travel Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — Passengers on international air charter flights between points in Canada and foreign nations totalled 382,202 in the first half of 1971, an increase of 27 per cent from the same period last year.

Monday May Provide Economic Solutions

OTTAWA (CP) — Major issues in U.S.-Canada economic relations may be resolved in discussions with President Nixon next Monday, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday.

While no final agenda has been drawn, he said it was "possible" that the U.S.-Canada auto trade pact and the defence production sharing agreement — both under negotiation by officials in Ottawa and Washington — would be discussed at the Washington sessions.

"I am waiting to know from officials whether they are at the state, as I think they are, at which we might be able to reach some conclusions. If further discussions are needed between officials, I will try not to take any final position in Washington."

Asked about press reports that the government is prepared to make concessions on the auto-pact question, Mr. Trudeau said he was "not in a position" now to state the Canadian position.

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States officials expressed guarded satisfaction Wednesday in response to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's assertion that Canada is prepared to make "contributions" to help U.S. ease its economic problems and abolish the 10-per-cent import surtax.

But one official said a suggestion that Canada might suspend temporarily the safeguards in the Canada-U.S. auto agreement "doesn't make much sense."

Sharp, in an interview, was said to have "indicated the Canadian contributions would include" suspension of the safeguards, an agreement to increase the $25 duty-free allowance for visiting Canadians returning from the U.S., and the purchase of more arms from the U.S. under the defence-sharing agreement.

"These are all live issues," said one official.

But, in the close-to-the-vest tradition that has surrounded U.S.-Canada negotiations since the Aug. 15 announcement of the surtax, many officials were hesitant to comment until any new Canadian ideas are presented through official channels.

Instead, they advanced arguments why Canada should indeed take steps, including a lifting of the auto pact safeguards — not just a suspension.

"This is the first I have heard of a temporary suspension and, frankly, I don't think the U.S. would go for it," a spokesman said.

The idea of the 1965 pact, with built-in safeguards to tilt it temporarily in Canada's favor, was "to give Canada a breathing space and then move on to full reciprocity where the forces of a free market would come into play." The Americans argue that the transitional period has passed.

"If we are just going to suspend the safeguards, with the threat that they could be reimposed later, that isn't full reciprocity."

Some Americans sympathetic to the Canadian position have argued that just such "forces of a free market" have given Canada the edge on both the auto and the defence agreements.

For instance, all Dodge Darts and Ford Mavericks are made in Canada and are big sellers.

Had the Edsel been selected for Canadian production, the auto trade balance would be different," said one congressional source, referring to the Ford product of the early 1950s that was a sales disaster.

The speculation here was that Canada might want to hold the safeguards in suspension against such time as Canadian plants might be assigned a string of poor-selling models.

State Drops Charges

LOS ANGELES — All charges have been dropped against Shirley Jean Sutherland, daughter of former NDP leader Tommy Douglas and former wife of actor Donald Sutherland.

Mrs. Sutherland, 37, and Donald Freed, 39, had been scheduled to go to trial on charges of conspiracy and possession of hand grenades allegedly intended for the Black Panthers.

In a surprise move, the federal government's special counsel, Dennis Kinnard, told U.S. district court Judge Warren Ferguson that the prosecution had decided to drop the charges "in the interest of justice."

Kinnard gave no reason, but he assured the judge the action was taken "with prejudice," which means the government is barred from ever again charging the defendants in the same case.

MOSCOW — The Soviet government has awarded a birthday Order of Lenin to retired Marshal Georgi Zhukov, the nation's greatest military hero. Tass news agency said Zhukov was given the nation's highest award — for the sixth time — "in recognition of his services to the state and the armed forces and on the occasion of his 75th birthday."

WASHINGTON — Federal Judge Julius Hoffman, who presided at the controversial Chicago Seven trial, is retiring. The White House has announced.

WATERFORD, Ore. — Terry Turner, the publicist who brought world renown to two sets of Siamese twins that he had "discovered" at small carnivals, has died of a stroke. He was 79. While manager of New Orleans's Crescent Theatre, Turner found in the 1920's the Siamese twins Violet and Daisy Hilton at a local carnival. They were the first Siamese twins exhibited since the day of circus impresario P. T. Barnum.

SANTIAGO, Chile — An opposition congressman has demanded that President Salvador Allende order Cuban Premier Fidel Castro to leave Chile immediately for alleged interference in this nation's internal affairs.

SATTAPHIP, Thailand — A government firing squad has executed without trial a U.S. Air Force officer. The execution of Thap Kawwaka, the first under the government's new crackdown on crime in Thailand, was carried out before thousands of spectators on a hill overlooking the base where the victim, Lt. Col. Harry Funk, 50, of Lockbourne, Ohio, was stationed.

TAXCO, Mexico — Jamie Castrejon Diaz, 33-year-old actor of the University of Guerrero, has been released near the place where he was kidnapped 12 days ago, near the village of Sabana Grande on the Mexico City-to-Acapulco highway about 125 miles southwest of Mexico City. A ransom of $200,000 was paid earlier.

TUCUMCARI, N.M. (UPI) — Victor Breen, district attorney of this northeastern New Mexico town near the Texas border, was shot to death in front of his home by a sniper using a high-powered rifle.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — French woman journalist Michele Ray was freed early, some 40 hours after she was NORTHBRIDGE, Calif. — The parents of a kidnapped college coed have resorted to a chain letter in the hope that an appeal for their daughter's life somehow will find its way to the abductor. Dark-haired, Michelle Hattem, 18, was abducted along with a boyfriend in the desert community of Hemet Nov. 21. The kidnapper threw the young man out of the car, shot at him, and fled. Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hattem said the chief purpose of their appeal is to try to let the kidnapper know the girl's boyfriend was not killed by the shot.

GRANBY, Que. — A high school teacher here said he has been fired from his job because he has a beard. Gerard Gosselin, a 26-year-old religion instructor, said he has appealed his dismissal to Education Minister Guy Saint-Pierre, Quebec ombudsman Louis Macdonald and the Civil Liberties Union.

taken from the home of a friend by three men and a woman claiming to be left-wing guerrillas, police said. Police confirmed that Miss

Ray, who appeared to be in good health, was left at the home of her friend, and strongly denied reports that it had been a "kidnapping."

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Josef Kramer the parched scroll was an offering. But could never erase the dreadful memories that have haunted him for 23 years.

As he presented the Torah Scroll to a suburban synagogue this week, Josef Kramer became hysteric with grief.

It recalled in all its dread clarity the day in 1943 when he smothered his 18-month-old son to save the lives of Jews being hunted by the Germans.

Israeli journalist Yitzhu Nimschitz brought to light Kramer's tragic story in a book published by the Israeli defence ministry, "Because Them."

It tells the stories of the Jews who sacrificed themselves to save other Jews from the Nazi holocaust of the Second World War, in which millions of them died.

He was present Monday night when Kramer presented the Torah Scroll, an Old Testament parchment written in Hebrew calligraphy, to the Ramat Yosef synagogue perpetuate the memory of the dead son.

So were some of the Jews Kramer's act of self-sacrifice.

He Sacrificed Only Son So 47 Lived

By PETER LYNCH

TEL AVIV (UPI) — For Josef Kramer the parchment scroll was an offering. But it could never erase the dreadful memories that have haunted him for 29 years.

As he presented the Torah Scroll to a suburban synagogue this week, Josef Kramer became hysterical with grief.

It recalled in all its dreadful clarity the day in 1943 when he smothered his 18-month-old son to save the lives of 47 Jews being hunted by Nazi Germans.

Israeli journalist Yitzhak Nimtsovitz brought to light Kramer's tragic story in a book published by the Israeli defence ministry, Because of Them.

It tells the stories of the Jews who sacrificed themselves to save other Jews from the Nazi holocaust of the Second World War, in which millions of them died.

He was present Monday night when Kramer presented the Torah Scroll, an Old Testament parchment written in Hebrew calligraphy, to the Ramat Yosef synagogue to perpetuate the memory of his dead son.

So were some of the Jews Kramer's act of self-sacrifice saved, Nimtsovitz said. "This man's anguish cannot be imagined. In front of those people, who could control himself? He was hysterical with grief."

Nimtsovitz said in 1943 Kramer, his wife Genia and their son David lived in the village of Dohinov, near Vilna in Latvia.

The Germans were hunting down Jews in the village, shooting them on sight.

Kramer built a bunker beneath his home to shelter his family and 45 other Jews.

Nimtsovitz said as searching German troops approached the underground hideout, Kramer's 18-month-old son David began crying loudly.

"All eyes in the bunker turned on Kramer. For a long anguished time he tried to smother the child's cries. And then he took the only possible action. He smothered his son to save their lives," Nimtsovitz said.

He said all the Jews in the bunker escaped. Some later fought with partisan groups in Eastern Europe. Many of them now live in Israel.

They were there Monday night to relive with Kramer again the most anguished moments of his life. Moments that have haunted him ever since.

Aged Goal:

By VINCENT J. BURKE
Columnist - Los Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON — The White House conference on aging Wednesday called on the government to guarantee every retired American over 65 a cash income higher than the earnings of a worker employed at the federal minimum wage.

The delegates also agreed that the elderly should get free health care, including eyeglasses, dentures and hearing aids, pending enactment of free health care for everybody.

For the 20 million persons over 65 in the U.S., it called for an immediate minimum cash income of $3,375 a year for single persons and $4,500 dollars for couples, with the levels to be adjusted upward every year. That compares with the $3,328 that can be earned working full-time at the current federal minimum wage of $1.00 an hour.

The conference endorsed for "priority consideration" the national health insurance plan sponsored by Senator Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) and backed by organized labor. President Nixon's health plan was not called up for a vote.

Nixon, who will address the conference at its closing session today, held a White House reception for the delegates Wednesday night.

The income and health proposals were approved by overwhelming voice vote by 300 delegates comprising the conference's income section. Under conference rules the resolution thereby became the recommendations of the entire conference.

The 3,500 delegates who began meeting Sunday were assigned to 14 different panels, each with a different subject matter. With no votes to be taken in plenary session, each panel spoke for the conference on its subject matter.

At present, there is no universal, federally-guaranteed income for elderly Americans. Some are not covered by social security or railroad retirement programs, and the states set benefit levels for welfare for the needy aged.

The income guarantee endorsed by the delegates was a giant version of the guarantee in Nixon's welfare reform bill which passed the House last summer and is scheduled for Senate action early next year.

The bill would establish a minimum income guarantee for all persons over 65, as well as the blind or disabled of any age. The guarantee level would be $1,800 for a single person and $2,400 for a couple.

Under the conference proposal, the income floor for older people would be provided through a combination of payments from social security and payments from general tax revenue.

If the person's regular social security benefit, coupled with any other income, fell short of the minimum guarantee, a supplementary payment to bring his income up to the minimum would be included in a single check from the social security administration.

Welfare Boost Idea Tabled

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council has tabled for three weeks city welfare director Walter Boyd's proposals to increase welfare payments. Boyd's proposal would increase the city's annual welfare bill by $662,000 by attempting to link welfare payments to the cost of living; if the proposal is adopted by municipalities and the provincial government, welfare costs throughout the province would rise by about $15.3 million, with $2.3 million paid by the municipalities.

Cattle Rustlers More Active

RED DEER (CP) — Cattle rustlers in central Alberta are more active this year than last, an RCMP investigator said Wednesday. Constable J. G. Dunn, who looks after reports of missing cattle for the area, said so far this year 26 charges have been laid, compared with seven for the whole of 1970.

Heiress Seizes Own Sculpture

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — A shapely blonde entered the Guggenheim Museum Wednesday and walked out with an $80,000 masterpiece by sculptor Constantin Brancusi, thus ending an 11-year court battle that had made front pages.

Mrs. Ileana Lindt was accompanied by two deputy sheriffs on her surprise morning visit to the small-shaped museum overlooking Central Park. It was two years and five days since the state supreme court had awarded her possession of Brancusi's 'The Muse' and she was tired of waiting for the museum to surrender it.

"They said they had never been served the proper papers, but they had," said the Romanian-born heiress to the Bulova watch fortune. "They were very rude to me and didn't want to give it up, but what could they do? I had the sheriffs with me."

Museum officials refused to comment. The Guggenheim had been willed the Brancusi, an egg-like white marble head cradled on a hand, by Arde Bulova, board chairman of the Bulova Watch Co., Inc., who died in 1958. His widow, Ileana, claimed ownership of The Muse in 1962 but failed to win her case in lower courts.

These courts held that although she bought the sculpture at auction for $7,000, her husband had paid for it. By 1969 the case had involved 40 judges and seached the state supreme court which ruled in Mrs. Lindt's favor. A New York Times story on the ruling brought 4,000 persons to the museum to view The Muse the next day.

"If the museum had been nice about it, I might have left it there on loan," Mrs. Lindt said. "I intend to exhibit it at museums, but not at the Guggenheim. They certainly had nothing to gain by being rude."

Mrs. Lindt said she had been a longtime friend of Brancusi, a Romanian who worked in Paris, and was at his bedside when he died in 1957. Best known for his 'Bird in Flight', he was considered the grand old man of abstract sculpture. The Muse, sculpted in 1912 was insured by the museum for $80,000.

Mrs. Lindt is separated from Auguste Rudolph Lindt of the Swiss chocolate family whom she married 10 years ago when he was ambassador to the United States. He recently retired from the foreign service as ambassador to India.

Kent State Student Admits Riot Charge

RAVENNA, Ohio (UPI) — Larry Shub, a former Kent State University student, pleaded guilty Wednesday to first degree riot charges growing out of the 1970 campus disorders at the school where four students were killed by Ohio national guardsmen.

Shub, 20, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, was the third of 25 persons indicted by a Portage County Grand Jury to be tried on charges stemming from the disturbances which began May 2, 1970, and were climaxed two days later when the students were shot to death.

'We Are Irish—and Proud'

By GEORGE INGLIS
Colonist Reporter

Feelings ran high as the Friends of Ireland Club launched its membership campaign in the Red Lion Inn Wednesday, and opinions were as divided as the sons and daughter of Erin were from the violent scenes in Belfast.

Club president Jim O'Sullivan of County Cork opened with a plea for formation of a good Irish club in Victoria, "one of the few cities in the western world where there isn't one."

He set the tone for debate when he made reference to "rising up to throw off the invader," and the invader "succeeding in ensuring the Catholic population by gerrymandering elections," and mentioned it was 4 a.m. in Ireland and rifle butts were crashing, jackboots stomping in the streets.

Friends of Erin Seek Members

"I don't want you to think our club is any kind of political club," he said, drawing groans from some, and laughs from others.

"Don't be stupid, man, after that speech!" Bill Wilson, a B.C. pilot whose father was a master murriner out of Belfast, said.

"It was a defence of the IRA, no more, no less," Wilson added.

O'Sullivan squelched him, saying he could bring it up at the coffee party later, but Wilson and a friend challenged his action on grounds of free speech.

with brogue until one man's voice raised and he addressed the meeting whimsically.

"This debate has been going on for 700 years," the unidentified speaker said. "If we solve it here tonight, then the good Lord should come down and bless us. Maybe the president did have just a flare of the south."

"We are not trying to straighten Ireland out, let us try to help the suffering."

He was applauded and Peggy McNulty, the woman who has been promoting formation of the club, and whose brother, she said, is on a relief committee in Belfast's St.

Patrick's County, in the heart of the troubled area, agreed.

Mrs. McNulty, who came from Belfast in 1968, said she wanted to see Irishmen band together and show the people in Ireland there were some who cared, by contributing to the Green Cross fund in the club, which would send the money to St. Patrick's relief fund in Belfast.

After the meeting, over coffee, the Friends of Ireland became just friends, and the debate took on a quieter tone.

Several people made it clear they wanted to truck with Sean Kenney, the self-styled IRA representative who was in Victoria a month ago.

"We want no truck with his kind of socialist, communist, whatsoever," O'Sullivan said — others agreed.

"We're just Irish, and proud of it, and we want to help them over there."

Ad Complaint Nears Home

A charge against the operator of a newsstand in the legislative building alleging that she sold a magazine containing liquor advertisements was laid by a Vancouver businessman Wednesday.

David Bader, 37, of Vancouver, said he laid the charge after he bought the magazine Tuesday afternoon from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind newsstand.

The charge, he told the Colonist, alleges that the sale of the Time magazine contravened the recent amendment to the B.C. Liquor Control Act which states persons distributing or publishing magazines or other publications containing liquor ads in the province is committing an offence.

Bader has laid two similar charges during the past three months.

The first charge was filed September in Nanaimo against B.C. Ferries general manager Monte Aldous and a newsstand vendor. Involved was a B.C. Outdoor magazine, with a liquor ad, he purchased aboard the Queen of Nanaimo Sept. 1.

He said the second charge was filed three days ago in Nanaimo against Aldous and another newsstand vendor. Involved, he said, were wine ads in a Home magazine he purchased aboard the Queen of Burnaby.

Wally Anderson, Victoria's senior prosecutor, said in a separate interview that he had been approached by Bader Wednesday about the sale. He said he referred the businessman, after a discussion, to Ted Mills, Victoria district's senior justice of the peace, to swear out the information.

Bader said that he bought the Time magazine after noting a number of liquor ads in it. He said he obtained a receipt from the proprietor as evidence.

No date for trial on the latest charge has been set, he said.

Daphne Temple speaks as rest of candidates wait turn

Trustees, Hopefuls Air Lifetime Clause

Teachers' Tenure Sparks Debate

By BARBARA MCINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Question of lifetime tenure for teachers sparked debate at an all-candidates meeting for trustees in Greater Victoria school district Wednesday night.

The meeting at Oak Bay Junior high school, sponsored by Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, was attended by about 45 people.

Opponents in the tenure debate were incumbent Peter Bunn who suggested a regular five-year review of tenure for each teacher and candidate Frank Preston who said teachers should continue to have lifetime tenure, although it should be possible to dismiss incompetent teachers.

Both positions received some support from the audience.

Preston said that reviewing each teacher's tenure every so often would "leave things ripe for a witch-hunt" if administrators or a board ever wanted to engage in one.

Preston said it was important trustees did a better job of selling their product to the community and to the provincial government. They should work to reduce the alienation many citizens feel toward the educational system.

He also suggested elementary schools should be smaller to make them more human.

Bunn urged greater community use of schools, more teacher aides to free highly-qualified teachers from administrative duties, and removal of school taxes from the homeowner.

He urged a campaign to get a good, modern school for the James Bay area as had been done at Victoria West and Blanshard.

Incumbent Mrs. Daphne Temple said students should have more freedom in the curriculum and there should be better programs for very young children and for those not going on to university.

Candidate Ted Robbins said his main concern was in lowering high education costs. He suggested the board might stop hiring personnel for a while and might put a temporary freeze on operating costs of schools.

Candidate Karel de Roo said students were not being taught to relate what they learned in school to real life. He said there should be a better drug education program, and teachers should not express political or religious beliefs to their pupils.

Incumbent Dr. H. A. Knight said trustees should keep costs as low as possible, but should not sacrifice the standard of education. He supported outdoor education, a more integrated curriculum, open-area schools, and broad adult education programs.

Candidate Harry Graham said the curriculum should be relevant to the needs of today's students, particularly in the field of ecology. He suggested a number of ways in which the burden of education costs could be removed from the homeowner, among them placing a greater tax on natural resource industries.

Brain Damage Death Cause

Miss Beatrice K. Booth, 77, of 1035 Pendergast, struck by a car Friday afternoon at Cook and Rockland, died about 2½ hours later in St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of brain damage and fractures received in the mishap, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday night. The inquest continues 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Provincial Law Courts building, 800-block Burdett.

Budget Already 'Barely Enough'

Money Lack Points To Teacher Layoff

Greater Victoria school board may be forced to lay off some teachers as early as the spring of 1972 because of a shortage of money, according to board chairman Allan McKinnon.

McKinnon told the Colonist Wednesday that the board would have to trim about $750,000 off an operating budget for 1972 that trustees had considered to be "just barely enough."

And, he said, the figure could rise substantially if an arbitration award gives district teachers a salary increase of more than the 6.5 per cent allotted in the provisional budget.

He made the comments after Education Minister Donald Brokenshire, on Tuesday, announced the basic education grant from the education department for 1972 — $15,190 for each instructional unit.

(An instructional unit is 30 elementary or 40 high school students.)

Although the grant for each unit is up 8.3 per cent from last year, a decrease in the number of units in the Greater Victoria district means its increase is only 5.5 per cent, McKinnon said.

The amount of the basic program for Victoria totals $20,572,344, and adding on the 8 per cent a district may go over the basic program, the board may spend $22,218,132 before going to referendum.

McKinnon said he could see the board "wringing out" about $200,000 from the provisional budget by cutting it even further. The cuts would include $60,000 budgeted for new teachers in the district to try to reduce the teacher-pupil ratio, which is already higher than in most B.C. districts.

It might be possible to save another $250,000 by not replacing teachers who retired or resigned during the year, he said, but even this would cause difficulties in the schools if teachers left in the middle of the year. Children would have to be moved into other classes which had already been together for at least one term.

"But where the rest of the money's going to come from, I don't know," McKinnon said. "Cutting teachers is the last possible priority, it's the last resort, but I think it's a priority we're going to have to get down to."

How many teachers might be cut and whether they would go at the end of term in June or earlier, depended upon what arbitration settlement the teachers received, he said.

He estimated that for each percentage point of increase teachers received above 6.5 per cent, another $180,000 would have to be chopped from the budget.

Brokenshire has previously announced that the department will share in teachers' salary increases only up to 6.5 per cent.

McKinnon said it was unlikely the board would take the operating budget to referendum because it would cost several thousand dollars just to do that, and the vote probably wouldn't be passed anyway.

The only other possible alternative, he said, was to operate the schools until they

McKinnon
... last resort

ran out of money in the fall and then close them down, as had been done in some American communities.

"No, it surely couldn't come to that," he said.

"We'll end up with something, but it's certainly going to cause a tremendous upheaval."

In Sooke school district, which is expanding quite rapidly, board chairman Fred Willway said the 8.3 per cent increase in the basic program for each unit "improved" the board's financial position.

The board should have little trouble staying under the 108 per cent limit unless its arbitration board's award to teachers is "out of line," he said.

Both Sides Gird For Labor Fight

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

All signs pointed Wednesday to a large-scale battle between construction unions and the contractors they have dubbed non-union.

Both sides are mustering their forces in an attempt to find whatever help they can. Contractors say they hope to officially form an association tonight as a line of defense against what they call "a campaign of coercion" by unions staging an all-out organizing drive.

They have also filed an official complaint with the B.C. Labour Relations Board, charging that the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council has used intimidation as a tactic.

The building trades council, in turn, has looked to the 60,000-member B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council and the 15,000-member Victoria Labor Council for support. The labor council pledged this support at its meeting Wednesday night. The larger group is expected to do the same today when its executive meets in Vancouver.

The battle, confined to Greater Victoria until now, threatens to spread throughout B.C.

Right now the chief target of the unions is Wigmar Construction Ltd. Pouring of cement at three Greater Victoria construction sites of the company has been halted by drivers who refuse to make deliveries. The drivers say they won't do so while non-union men are on the job.

Union leader John Schibill told the labor council meeting Wednesday that, contrary to common belief, the construction unions are not closed to newcomers, but are ready and willing to sign up any of the non-union men now on the construction sites. This, he said, was agreed to by all of the unions before the drive began.

He said it was understood that about 65 non-union contractors were forming an organization that would hire non-union help.

Spokesmen for the contractors told the Colonist their organization would defend the rights of both unionists and non-unionists and that both would be hired wherever possible.

Their claim is that the union officials are trying to force membership on men who don't want it and to tell the contractors who they can and can't hire.

Bruce Davenport, owner of Marston Homes Ltd., said in an interview that even some of the union men on the job are unhappy with the tactics of their leaders. He said this is because they are "being pulled off the job" so often.

"If he (union member) starts on the job today, he doesn't know if he's going to be there after the coffee break," he said.

He said the contractors were meeting for the second time tonight. Davenport said upward of 60 contractors attended the first meeting and "double, maybe triple" this number have indicated willingness to join since.

Schibill, who is both vice-president of the labor council and secretary of the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, claimed at the Wednesday night meeting that some non-union contractors were bringing workers in from Alberta.

He said this was not only unfair to unemployed local people, but added up to exploitation of the Alberta people. He said they were earning only about half the wages paid union men.

Unitas' View Divergent

'When You're Emotional You Don't Think Well'

BALTIMORE (AP) — Johnny Unitas is as surprising in his mental approach to the game of football as his play selection is to the opposition.

While coaches, players, reporters and broadcasters extol the value of emotion in the contact sport, the Baltimore Colts' quarterback takes a divergent view.

"Football is a thinking man's game, not an emotional game despite what some people think," Unitas says. "As far as I'm concerned, when you're emotional, you don't think well."

Unitas, clearheaded and cool, directed an astonishing 37-14 victory over Oakland Raiders last Sunday as he made the moves of a chess master in dissecting the Raiders' defence.

For his generalship, Unitas was selected as The Association Press Offensive Player of the Week in the National Football League.

CONFUSES OPPOSITION

"It's exciting to play with John as quarterback," said centre Bill Curry, "because you never know what he's going to call."

Baltimore's new running game has given Unitas more options than ever to confuse the opposition.

"John was effective in the past, even when everyone knew he had to throw," said tight-end John Mackey. "Now he moves us on the ground, too. He's the master."

The star against Oakland was only the second of the season for Unitas, who underwent surgery in April to repair a torn Achilles tendon.

It was the latest in a long line of injuries for the 38-year-old veteran who is in his 18th NFL season. Once again, he recuperated more quickly than expected.

AMAZES TRAINER

"John is a unique physical specimen in that respect," said trainer Eddie Block, who then ticked off the various injuries Unitas has sustained:

"A punctured lung, broken ribs, a severe tennis elbow, broken nose, a knee operation, severe contusion of the right shoulder, and a great deal of osteoarthritis."

"According to medical averages," Block said, "it takes six months to recover from the Achilles operation. John was ready a month ahead of time."

Unitas who had been written off once before — when he sat out the 1968 season with arm problems — did not look particularly impressive while being used sparingly early this year.

Skiing Cochrans with Coach

The Cochrans of Rutland, Vermont, are the top-rated skiing family in the United States. Shown meeting their coach, Hank Tauber (right) are Bob, Barbara Ann, Marilyn and Lindy Cochran. The International Ski Federation Wednesday named Barbara as the top giant slalom skier in the world for the second straight year but dropped Marilyn to second place in the special slalom class behind Britt Lafforgue. The Cochrans are training at Mt. Bachelor in Oregon for the Winter Olympics. (AP)

South Africa Takes Plunge To Avoid Ostracism

STANLEY UYS
Colonist-Observer Service
CAPE TOWN — South Africa has taken the plunge into multiracial sport in the hope of saving itself from being totally ostracized by the international sports community.

For the first time, white and non-white South African sportsmen are competing against each other inside the country at officially recognized events. They are sharing the same changing rooms, toilet facilities and eating arrangements. In some cases, they are even sharing the same hotels.

This could never have happened under the late Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd, who took a hard line on apartheid in sport. It is the direct consequence of the new sports policy announced by the present prime minister, John Vorster, earlier this year — a policy which itself had been subjected to a series of adjustments since 1967 when Vorster first began to show serious interest in preserving South Africa's remaining international sports links.

INTERNATIONAL ONLY
The crux of the new policy is that it allows for "international" events to be held in South Africa at which the apartheid rules are waived. This means that if the organizers of a sports meeting can persuade the government that the meeting merits recognition as an "international" tournament it can be declared exempt from the apartheid rules.

Not only are non-white sportsmen from other countries permitted to attend these international meetings on terms of absolute equality with whites, but non-white South African sportsmen, too, are permitted to take part on identical terms.

FIRST TIME
For example, the multiracial athletics meeting held at the Green Point stadium in Cape Town on Nov. 26 and 27 had 10 black South African athletes taking part. They were accommodated at the city's plush Mount Nelson Hotel, where 12 black athletes from Lesotho, Malawi, Madagascar and the Ivory Coast also were accommodated, as well as 47 white athletes from European and other countries.

Nothing like this has happened in South Africa before. The only concession to apartheid here is that the 137 white South African athletes were put up in another hotel, nearer the stadium.

SPECTATORS SEGREGATED
During the past few years, South Africans have been getting accustomed to seeing occasional black foreigners staying at the country's big whites-only hotels, but this is the first time that a contin-

Multiracial Events Must Be International

gent of non-white South Africans have moved into a whites-only hotel.

At the Green Point stadium, the athletes, white and non-white, South African and foreign, shared the facilities equally. The spectators, though, were segregated as usual.

GOLF WAS FIRST
Actually, the athletics meeting at the Green Point stadium was not the first international event to be held under Vorster's new policy. The first was the Professional Golfers' Association championships in Johannesburg, in mid-November, with 16 non-white South Africans taking part. The record field of 183 professionals embraced all South Africa's best golfers, including Gary Player, and a strong overseas contingent, among them the American Negro Lee Elder, and the Taiwan Chinese Lu Liang-Huan.

Many of the players, including the South African non-whites, were accommodated at the Holiday Inn at Jan Smuts Airport. There was no segregation on the course or in the clubhouse, nor were spectators segregated on the course but there are separate toilets for the spectators and separate stands.

REFLECTS COMPROMISE
This rather tortuous arrangement reflects the compromise Vorster has reached between the demands of international opinion and the prejudices of his white supporters. The compromise falls short of allowing multiracial sports in South Africa at all levels. On this Vorster refuses to budge. If this is the price South Africa must pay in order to be accepted back into the international sports community, he says, then South Africa will not pay it. It is too high.

Vorster's policy allows for multiracial "international" events in South Africa; it allows for multiracial teams to visit South Africa; it allows for a multiracial South African team to go to the Olympic Games, if the I.O.C. would accept such a team, (but not to any other sports event); and it allows for individual non-white sportsmen to come to South Africa for championship events.

ENTER POLITICS
But it does not allow for white and non-white South African sportsmen to play against or with each other in the country in the ordinary run of sports activities. This, says Vorster, is "integration." It is at this point, he believes, that politics enters the scene. It would lead, he insists to social and political integration and to the eventual swamping of the whites.

South Africans are waiting to see now whether the limited measure of multiracialism in South African sport (or "multi-nationalism", as it is officially known) will persuade international sports bodies to lift their boycotts of South Africa; or, failing that, whether this limited multi-racialism will in time condition white South Africans to accept more and more multiracialism as the years go by and to pave the way eventually for racially-integrated sport in the country — assuming that South Africa still has some years left for experimentation before its fate in international sport is finally decided.

Howard Cosell

Mathis, Manager Threaten To Sue

NEW YORK (AP) — Buster Mathis and his manager threatened legal action Wednesday unless ABC and sportscaster Howard Cosell publicly apologize for their television presentation of the Mathis-Muhammad Ali fight.

"The American Broadcasting Company and Howard Cosell have seriously damaged the reputation and earning power of a serious athlete," Jimmy Iselin, president of Peers Management, which handles Mathis, said at a news conference.

Mathis and Iselin also said they would ask that ABC show the film of the fight in its entirety.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, said in a statement that there would be no showing of the fight and no apology.

Cosell divided the fight when it was shown on Wide World of Sports Nov. 26, three days after Ali won an easy 12-round decision. The fight was shown in part with the action accompanied by music and subtitles such as "Ouch."

Iselin said after the news conference that he would confer with his lawyer on what action to take if he does not receive satisfaction from ABC.

Ali, who talked to the news conference via telephone from Philadelphia, said he was not upset with the presentation.

"They're entitled to present what they want to," he said.

North Saanich All-Candidates Meeting

Mayoralty Challenge Based on Cost Factors

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Reporter

North Saanich has the lowest general mill rate of any municipality in the Greater Victoria area, Mayor J. B. Cummings told an all-candidates meeting Wednesday night at the Legion Hall on Mills Road.

Cummings told about 85 ratepayers who attended the meeting sponsored by the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce the municipality has a general mill rate of 18.33 compared with Sidney's 24.43 and 24.20 for Central Saanich.

"It is the only organized municipality in B.C. that has no debts," said Cummings in his bid for re-election Dec. 11.

He said his record during his six years on council was there for the voters. "I'll be perfectly happy to be judged by it."

Ald. Trevor Davis, who is challenging Cummings for the mayor's chair this election, emphasized the need to cut down the growth of the municipal administration staff.

He said it is "one of the highest per capita" of any municipality and warned if it became too large the provincial government may force amalgamation with Sidney.

Ald. Neil Horth in her bid for re-election said it was her policy not to identify with any particular group, and she would continue to give an unbiased approach to municipal problems.

She drew a burst of applause from the audience later during the question period when one ratepayer observed she was writing during the talks of the candidates and asked if she was taking notes for the mayor.

"I have the right to doodle if I darned well want to doodle," snapped Mrs. Horth.

Paul Grieve, seeking one of the three open council seats, called for a change in mayor and two of the incumbents.

Grieve said there was no over-all plan for the municipality and if he is elected he would press for development of an advisory planning committee and also a land use plan.

Aldermanic hopeful Eric Sherwood said he would work for the residents on fixed incomes. He also advocated building "a few walkways through the municipality" to make it safer walking for the elderly who have to use the roadsides.

The mayor spoke for incumbent Ald. H. A. Taylor, who is suffering from "chronical flu" and could not attend the meeting.

Cummings pointed out that Taylor's expertise as an engineer has stood the municipality in good stead on numerous occasions.

"He has worked unflinchingly for the good of the community and without him we would need one more man on our staff," Cummings said.

Aldermanic candidate Tony Rose told the meeting his platform did not differ greatly from that of Grieve's.

"I'm primarily interested in the future of North Saanich," he told the meeting the Deep Cove firehall on Wain Road was started illegally because it was constructed without being issued a building permit.

During the question period it was emphasized by Cummings the municipality did not have to get a permit from one of its staff to build a municipal building.

School trustee Charles MacNeill, in his bid for re-election, said he did not believe teachers should be on school boards and pointed out that teachers' salaries, over which school boards, he said, have no control, account for 75 per cent of the school board budget.

Rubymay Parrott, seeking to return to the Saanich school board, said she was particularly concerned about the method of educational financing.

"Education taxes must be taken-off the land," she said and noted the new Alberta government has proposed such legislation for next year.

Mrs. Parrott also criticized the school bus schedules. She told the meeting the schedules should be investigated and then improved.

Canadians Opposed

WASHINGTON (CP)—Efforts by a Canadian member of Parliament and the Canadian Wildlife Federation to join a United States court action against the trans-Alaska pipeline are being resisted by all three defendants involved.

Ed Berlin, lawyer for David Anderson (L.-Esquimalt-Saanich) and the wildlife federation, said Wednesday he has received notice that their application is being opposed by the U.S. Justice department, the state of Alaska and by the Alyeska Corp., a consortium of oil companies seeking to build the controversial trans-Alaska pipeline.

Anderson and the federation announced Nov. 15 that they were seeking permission to intervene as interested parties in a legal suit brought by American conservation groups who oppose the line, which would also involve transporting oil by tanker along the British Columbia coast to refineries on the U.S. mainland.

Berlin said the three defendants argue that Anderson and the federation have no legally protected rights that would be put in jeopardy if the pipeline were built, nor legal standing to enter the case.

The defendants contend that the American conservation groups adequately represent any interests the Canadians might have. And they say the Canadian intervention is "untimely."

Berlin said he would file a response on behalf of the Canadians within a few days.

There was no indication when the district court here would rule on the application, but Anderson has said he believes appeals could be carried to the U.S. Supreme Court by either side, if necessary. It is the first such intervention by non-Americans in a U.S. environmental action.

Pool Safety Controls
'Well Within Rules'

Every precaution had been taken to ensure safety at the new Crystal Pool in Central Park when a near-drowning occurred there Tuesday, an official said Wednesday.

Ena Chow, nine, of 974 North Park, remained in poor condition Wednesday night at St. Joseph's Hospital after the accident which occurred Tuesday afternoon, hospital authorities reported.

Pool manager Bill Young, in an interview, said safety precautions at the new Crystal Pool were well within B.C. government regulations when the mishap occurred. He said regulations require one life-guard for every 100 swimmers.

"We have been a bit concerned that we would be caught off base in the early days because of the hectic schedule of opening week programs. There has been thorough planning to make sure we are not caught off base," Young said.

Inspectors' Brigade Is Lopsided

Federal, Provincial or Municipal —Either Too Much or Too Little

By GEORGE INGLIS
Colonist Reporter

Government inspectors, those silent men and women with poised pencils and notebooks who enforce federal, provincial and municipal laws, appear to be in short supply in some areas and overstocked in others, depending on the point of view.

A recent telephone survey by the Colonist indicated a shortage of inspectors in some departments where the number of inspections per year were required by law; an adequate supply in other areas, where the number of inspections is limited to as many as the inspectors can handle with no stipulated requirement, and a plentiful supply "when you don't particularly want them," as one building contractor put it.

'Impossibility'

Only one federal branch was forthright in indicating a shortage of inspectors — the weights and measures branch of the consumer affairs department.

In this branch, a one-man inspection staff, Jack McIlven, is expected to make annual inspection of over 3,000 weighing and measuring devices on the island, produce and meat scales, truck scales, gasoline pumps etc.

Regional weights and measures manager Paul Dionne of Vancouver, McIlven's boss, labeled his job "a physical impossibility," but optimistically predicted an improvement in the spring when a new Weights and Measures Act comes into force, eliminating the yearly checks, in favor of random spot-checking.

It was harder to pinpoint a shortage of inspectors in the federal agricultural department's plant inspection branch, where head man Roy Messum and a crew of two must inspect all plants and bulbs leaving and entering the island, examine the holds of all ships loading in Victoria, and conduct the Golden Nematode quarantine project and "ultra-virus-free" potato plant program.

"It depends on how thorough a job is wanted," Messum said. He did say, however, he has been hampered by department change in policy which stopped him from hiring part-time primary plant inspectors during peak shipping seasons.

If shortages do exist in his department, however, they are not apparent to two of the island's biggest growers — bulb, vegetable and flower grower Geoffrey Vantreight and vegetable grower Ed Lum, both of Saanich.

Both men said they never had to wait for inspections by Messum and his crew, necessary before exporting, provided they give him reasonable notice.

Understaffed

Probably the greatest inspector shortage in the area is felt by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Health Board, a regional body comprised of Victoria-Oak Bay-Esquimalt which contracts its services out for health and sanitation inspections in the South Vancouver Island area.

Senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has stated several times in past months he is acutely understaffed in his manifold areas of inspections, which include restaurant and drinking establishment inspections, water testing, malfunctioning septic tanks, catering firm inspections, public beach sampling, inspection of shell fish waters.

To handle his 600 square mile jurisdiction Whitbread has a director, Elwood Gropp, an assistant director, Laurel Benham (also senior health inspector), and 10 public health inspectors, five stationed in the main office on Cook and five in Saanich.

Bad Areas

Recently, North and Central Saanich, who had been doing their own septic tank inspections, asked Whitbread to resume duties in this field, an urgent request based on the fact that inadequate inspections have resulted in 54 known malfunctioning septic tanks in the area, officials said.

Whitbread made it clear he could only handle the extra load if he got more inspectors approved by the provincial health department.

Another area where inspections would appear to be inadequate is the federal Indian Affairs department, where such occurrences as the "incredible health and safety hazards" recently reported at the Cowichan Indian band reserve frequently make news.

Here again, there is no yardstick as to what is adequate inspection.

Dr. John Murie of Vancouver, director of medical services for southern B.C. for the Indian Affairs department, said he has no problems at all, "in fact, we have recently been encouraged by Ottawa to review our requirements and report on any needs."

A department official in Nanaimo, headquarters for the island, said there has been no health inspector on the island for almost a year, since one has a leave of absence, and no one had been appointed in his place.

"If we need someone, we can always send to Vancouver for him," the official said.

Tests Made

Murie said the full complement for the island is one building inspector and one health inspector (the one on leave of absence), but there are no regularly scheduled inspections, only investigation of complaints or inspection ordered from higher up in the department.

Steamship inspector Bob Baird of the federal marine services is another man with a multitude of duties, handled by himself and his two-man staff — an engineer and a hull man.

Baird and his crew make annual tests on all ships over 100 tons sailing out of south Vancouver Island, which includes B.C. and highways department ferries, testing all fire, lifesaving and electrical systems. Smaller boats, mainly fishing and cruise boats are checked every four years.

The number of boats inspected are not indicative of the time consumed, Baird said, since they range from several hours to several days in length, according to the ship and its condition.

Marine inspections include covering drydocking procedures, checking all machinery to be installed in ship construction, approving plans for smaller ships, fishboats, and following construction to the point of issuance of certificate of completion. Last year, the inspectors checked 174 life rafts while they were undergoing their annual servicing.

Baird conducted 324 examinations last year for marine engineers, marking and grading them himself, and all three inspectors will have their duties expanded considerably in the future with recently extended powers as pollution officers, under broadened pollution prevention regulations of the Canada Shipping Act.

In the municipal field, Greater Victoria's two largest areas, Saanich and Victoria, have different approaches to inspection, but building contractors who work in both areas stated there are no waits for inspections which would indicate shortage of inspectors.

BREAST CANCER: A MEDICAL DILEMMA

Radical surgery has long been regarded by most cancer specialists as the treatment for breast cancer. But — as reported in the December issue of Reader's Digest — a growing minority of cancer experts believe that far less mutilating forms of treatment may give breast-cancer patients an equal, or even better, chance of survival. What lies behind this medical controversy? Should women consent to radical mastectomies? Or should they search instead for surgeons willing to perform more conservative and less disfiguring operations? How can breast-cancer patients maximize their chances of survival? For a frank and honest discussion of these and other questions, read CONTRADICTION: OVER BREAST CANCER — in December Reader's Digest. Pick up your copy today.

BREAST CANCER: A MEDICAL DILEMMA

Radical surgery has long been regarded by most cancer specialists as the treatment for breast cancer. But — as reported in the December issue of Reader's Digest — a growing minority of cancer experts believe that far less mutilating forms of treatment may give breast-cancer patients an equal, or even better, chance of survival.
What lies behind this medical controversy? Should women consent to radical mastectomies? Or should they search instead for surgeons willing to perform more conservative and less disfiguring operations? How can breast-cancer patients maximize their chances of survival? For a frank and honest discussion of these and other questions,

TV Show To Visit Victoria

The 10-year-old CBC television program Reach for the Top will make its annual visit to Victoria Dec. 13 to 16 at the McPherson Playhouse, CBC officials announced Wednesday.

Eight schools will send teams to tapings of the Vancouver Island section of the high school quiz show. The tapings will be free to the public with tickets available Dec. 6 at the McPherson box office and the schools involved.

Tapings will be, at 8 p.m. Dec. 13, Oak Bay vs.

Alberni and Esquimalt vs. Cowichan; at 8 p.m. Dec. 14, Nanaimo vs. Georges Vanier of Courtenay and Qualicum Beach vs. Mount Douglas; at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 15, the Dec. 13 winners and then the Dec. 14 winners, and at 8 p.m. Dec. 16, the final between the two winners Dec. 15.

The program host will again be former Victoria announcer Terry Garner. The Island winner will receive a $400 scholarship and will enter the B.C. final next spring.

Disclosure 'Harmed Relations'

Colonist Reporter
Health Minister Ralph Lofmark says The Daily Colonist's disclosure in October of a study of hospital inefficiencies "would seem nothing more than an attempt to discredit the good relations between the medical profession and the government."

"I can assure you there is absolutely no intention on the part of government to criticize either hospital or the medical profession, and I deplore any attempt to link this report with a particular hospital," he adds.

Lofmark makes his observations in a letter published in the current B.C. Medical Journal.

"Please feel free to make whatever use of this letter you would find appropriate," says the minister.

The short-title of the study to which the minister referred in his letter is the Longridge Report, Dr. Scott Wallace, independent member of the Le-gisature for Oak Bay and a member of Royal Jubilee Hospital medical staff, says a report by Dr. David Longridge, while it did not cite a hospital, undoubtedly referred to Jubilee.

In his letter to the medical journal Lofmark declines to mention the name of the hospital but says:

"The medical staff and the administration of this hospital, in good faith, agreed to have the report made available to other hospitals as a guide for their studies of bed utilization, i.e. make available the results of their own scrutiny to enable other hospitals to appraise their utilization."

Door Rip-Off Costly

Joseph Latondress, a 20-year-old woodworker from Quesnel, shattered a long time over a bill of slightly more than $300 from the B.C. Telephone Co.

Shortly after 2 a.m. Wednesday, Latondress blew his cool, pulling down the two front doors of the phone company's headquarters at 1321 Blanshard.

By the time he was finished in Victoria Provincial Court later in the day, he faced fines and damages totalling another $1,350.

The big, burly Latondress pleaded guilty to a charge of mischief and was fined $400, then pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of marijuana and was fined another $250. Finally, Judge William Ostler ordered Latondress to repay the $700 damage claimed by B.C. Tel.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Latondress backed a tow truck to the front doors at 1321 Blanshard at about 2:05 a.m., tied a three-quarter-inch chain to the doors, drove away — pulling the doors off, and then left. When stopped at Fort and Morrison soon afterward, Latondress was found to have a plastic bag of marijuana in one pocket.

Latondress said his story began about two years ago when he lived at Port Alberni. He had a phone put in his house but then there was a woodworkers' strike and he asked B.C. Tel. to take it out. They didn't, he said, and the people who moved in a couple of months after he left ran up a phone bill of "a little over $300."

This past Monday, said Latondress, B.C. Tel. "brought me to court" in Victoria for the money and "I didn't make out too good... I lost my case."

Asked by Ostler why he had torn off the doors, Latondress said: "I knew I was wrong. They're a big company. I can't see any other way I can tackle 'em."

Ostler said it would be "impossible for a civilized society to allow" such retribution — "if everybody that lost a court case went out and avenged themselves, we would have anarchy."

He imposed a fine rather than a jail term because he felt Latondress had "the balance of his reason upset temporarily."

The judge allowed Latondress to pay the $680 in fines at $30 a month starting Jan. 1 and explained the $700 for B.C. Tel. was not a fine but was like a civil-court judgment.

He suggested Latondress work out payment with the company, as he had suggested earlier the woodworker should have applied for Legal Aid in fighting the original assessment.

"I think I'll get a lawyer next time," said Latondress. "I think you're a fairly decent chap," said Ostler. "I think you should."

Hexachloro Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department plans a general restriction on the use of hexachlorophene, a disinfectant and soap additive, in products sold in the United States because of its use as a cause of brain damage.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, the directorate, said the disinfectant has been used without ill effects for more than 20 years by the new-born infants.

He said vaginal deodorants are the only products containing hexachlorophene that may be subject to more stringent control because of their use.

U.S. consumer advocate Ralph Nader asked the Food and Drug Administration earlier this year to classify hexachlorophene as a prescription drug.

The recommendation was based on experiments showing evidence of brain damage in rats which had eaten containing hexachlorophene.

Other studies had shown blood levels of the chemical in some persons who use deodorants were "getting dangerously close" to those of affected animals.

Bill of Rights Victory

Indian Woman Status Winner

TORONTO (CP) — A vivacious 23-year-old Ojibway woman's love for a white man and her pride in being a Canadian Indian have combined to force a major revision of the federal Indian Act by the courts with important consequences for the rest of Canada's 240,000 native people.

Jeanette Cordiere Lavell, now living in Toronto, lost her status as a registered Indian and band rights on her Manitoulin Island reserve when she married a white man.

At that time, the Indian Act said that any Indian woman marrying a non-Indian automatically forfeits her Indian status. However, Indian men marrying non-Indian women retain status and band rights.

With no official support and using legal aid, she challenged the act in the courts, claiming that it contravened the Bill of Rights by discriminating against women.

The Federal Court said she was correct and torpedoes the section of the act that set out the ground rules. It was a major victory for women's rights. And it was a rare instance of the Bill of Rights acquiring legal teeth in a courtroom.

But the decision has generated complications for Indian associations across Canada, band councils, the Indian affairs department and its minister, Jean Chretien.

Chretien told the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians, representing about 20,000 Indians in southwestern Ontario, last weekend that he would like to see the decision appealed. The association itself called for an appeal, and the federal justice department is considering testing the decision at a higher level in the courts.

Many Canadian Indian leaders fear that allowing women to retain status when "marrying out" will open the door to a massive invasion of whites onto reserve lands.

At present, the children from these mixed marriages do not acquire full band rights. However, a curious anomaly in the act prior to the Lavell case dictated that the children of an Indian woman in a mixed marriage would be declared white if born in legal wedlock, Indian if born illegitimately.

The leaders opposed to the Lavell decision wonder how long it will be before the courts rule that a mixed-marriage child should be accorded the full rights of a purely Indian child.

As one spokesman put it: A large-scale migration on to reserves by white husbands and acquisition of rights by gradually whiter generations of children would destroy the country's native culture and heritage far more effectively than the abuses and neglect of the last 200 years.

Richard Isaac, chief of the 8,000-member Six Nations Confederacy based at Brantford, Ont., sees retention of status by an Indian woman in a mixed marriage as "just the start."

He worries that the Indian reserves "will eventually be dissolved."

"We don't discriminate against anyone but when a girl marries off the reserve, her husband is responsible for her. This is common with any race — the man is responsible for his family."

Chretien and his department have shown a degree of ambivalence about the case — the department doesn't want to come across as anti-feminist, but also wants to protect the reserves.

Two years ago Chretien and his advisers were talking in terms of abolishing the act following publication of a departmental white paper on the native population. However, many Indian organizations, including the Iroquois association, have since urged its retention in some revised form.

In any event, the Indians want to settle accounts with the federal government on treaty rights and aboriginal lands claims before they start talking about the Indian Act.

And now the department says the act will remain in force as long as the Indians themselves want it that way, even though both sides concede it is riddled with discriminatory clauses from another century.

In the meantime, Mrs. Lavell and her husband Davis, a Ryerson Polytechnical Institute student here, are wondering why no major Indian organization saw fit to back them in their fight against a piece of legislation that clearly discriminated against Indian women.

Mrs. Lavell said she decided to tackle the problem herself because nobody else seemed interested in doing something about it, including organized groups of Indians.

"I think we've brought it home that how they have to do something about it," she said. "No matter what happens, I'll always be an Indian person — no matter what the Indian Act says."

Officials Start Checks On Recall Systems

The Food and Drug Administration and the Metropolitan Board of Health are currently working together to monitor effectiveness of the voluntary recall system of a food product in the Victoria area, an FDA official reported Tuesday.

Karl Odermatt, FDA officer in charge of the Victoria district, said in an interview that the product in question is a canned luncheon meat product recalled Friday by Swift Canadian Co. Ltd.

Odermatt, whose area of responsibility encompasses Vancouver Island, said a quick check he made on Tuesday revealed that 50 per cent of six Victoria area supermarkets once had the recalled product in stock. He said the three supermarkets immediately removed the product from their shelves when they heard about the recall through news media.

Swift Canadian initiated an immediate country-wide recall of the product, Prem, after indications appeared of underprocessing in certain production lots.

Odermatt said the FDA and the health board will attempt to determine how retail outlets received news of the recall.

He said initial findings have revealed that most store managers learned about the recall through the media. In one case, he said, a store manager learned about the recall from a customer requesting a refund on a can of Prem.

The monitoring program, he said, is part of a nationwide effort. He said findings will be sent to Ottawa.

No toxic organisms, Odermatt said, have been discovered in cans of Prem in the Victoria area so far.

A company spokesman said the lots affected are those designated as E 132 and E 246 inclusive.

Odermatt said a few swelled cans were discovered in eastern Canada and a small proportion of the cans contained harmless traces of toxic organisms.

I can't imagine why people laugh when I tell them I was hit by a garbage truck.

Believe me, there is nothing humorous about being in an ancient German compact car and being chased all over the street by a Mack truck, laden with orange peelings and coffee grounds.

And I told my husband so, when I returned the car to him minus two fenders, two headlights and a trunk lid. "This car is Hitler's Revenge and you may have it," I said. "We just don't seem to communicate."

"I've told you once I've told you a hundred times," he said. "The car doesn't understand a word of English. It responds only to German commands."

"I tried that," I said. "I saw this truck begin to back up and I said, 'Das ist ein garbage truck, junkhead, let's get out of here.'"

"What happened?"

"Nothing happened. It just sat there like a stick until the truck hit us. I tried blasting the horn and it peep-peeped like it was apologizing. Incidentally, the horn broke off in my hand. It's in the glove compartment."

"Then what happened?"

"I ran out of German. That's what happened. The truck still didn't know I was back there and started at me again. I tried every German word I know: glockenspiel, pumpnickel, Marlene Dietrich. I even sang a chorus of Oh Tannenbaum. That is when the second impact hit. That did it! I whacked it on the instrument panel, and said, 'Du bist ein cheapie, that's what you are. One more hit we're going to look like an crock of sauerkraut. Just about that time, the driver got out of his truck and said, very surprised, 'I thought I hit a bump in the road.' How's that for humiliation!"

"Don't worry. I think we can fix her up."

"Fix her?" I shouted. "You wouldn't dare. Not after what she's put me through. Just think of the merits of a big car. No more shimmying into the seat like a snake into a sleeping bag. No more mud goggles on rainy days. No more massaging your cold feet and shifting gears at the same time. Think what it would be like to pass cars on a hill. And to ride with your legs outstretched, instead of in a fetal position? Just imagine. We could talk to it in English. No more having to say — by the way, what is it you say when you want the car to go in reverse?"

"Mutter, Bitte," he said. "Which means?" I sighed wearily.

"Mother, may I?"

It figured.

Earnings Rise In Hong Kong

'No Strange Look'

NEW YORK (AP) — Spring clothes gently prompt a woman to be ladylike, to settle down, to get organized and behave herself.

Two designers at the American Designer Showings on Tuesday reassured customers that their clothes are not shockers.

"There is no great strange look here," said Kasper for Joan Leslie.

Adele Simpson's collection was called "newly yet non-bizzare."

The immaculate prints, the carefully-matched ensembles, the luminous and grand evening clothes — all suggest serenity. Miss Simpson's day costumes were said to have "calm straight lines," presumably for the calm, straight woman.

Poisonings Frequent

Rush Hour Kitchen Danger to Children

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — Don't let your child become a poisoning statistic this year, says the education service of the federal food and drug directorate in its publication Dispatch.

In 1968, there were more than 47,000 poisonings, accidental ingestions and contacts reported by 281 poison control centres across Canada. Children under 5 years of age accounted for almost 70 per cent of cases recorded.

"Where location was indicated, most of these incidents occurred in the kitchen between the hours of 4 and 6 in the evening," the publication says. "Children are hungry at this time and mothers may be unaware of the danger when they are busy preparing a meal."

"In the mornings, the bedroom and bathroom are areas where frequent poisonings and accidental ingestions occur because people leave medication on night tables, bureaus and vanity tops."

"During the day, while mothers are doing their household cleaning tasks, they are often interrupted by a ringing telephone or doorbell and they leave open bottles of furniture polish, drain cleaner or liquid bleach where curious little children easily find them."

Poison control centres in Canada in 1968 reported 1,000 incidents of ingestion of children's headache pills, the majority of cases involving children aged 2 and 3.

To reduce the probability of death or serious illness from such accidents, the food and drug directorate set new regulations in March, 1970, for the packaging of children's headache tablets.

Manufacturers now are required to package this product in quantities not larger than 24 tablets of 1/4-grain strength.

Thus a child could only ingest 30 grains by eating the contents of one bottle, an amount not considered likely to cause fatal consequences when eaten by a child of 2 or 3 years although the child could become quite ill.

Children often get into medicines other than headache tablets, including tranquilizers, analgesics and sleeping capsules.

"Take every precaution when you have small children in your home and ask your pharmacist to dispense prescriptions for tablets or capsules in a vial with a child-resistant closure," the article says.

The best protection, however, was to keep potentially dangerous items out of reach of children, preferably in a locked storage cupboard.

The article urges parents to make sure that products used outside such as gasoline, pesticides and fertilizers are also kept away from children.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old boy who would like your views on something. I am not conceited, but I just happen to have a terrific head of hair. If I say so myself, I wear my hair fairly long — not to the shoulders, but the ears are covered and it's full in the back. My hair is neat and clean and well barbered. It looks nifty and lots of people have said so.

The problem is that my Dad hates my hair and has made some nasty remarks about it. Now dig this. It came to me all of a sudden when I looked at him the other night. His bald dome was shining under the living room light and it dawned on me that he may be jealous of my hair because he doesn't have any. Is it possible? Could this be the reason for lots of fights all over the country? Have I hit on something? — Mop Top.

Dear Mop: Yup. It's possible. But a lot of Dad's with great heads of hair feel as your Dad does. And so do their wives. How would you explain that?

of the marriages involve children — his and hers.

Let's face it, it's difficult to know how far a step-parent should go in disciplining a child who is present weekends only — or for two weeks in the summer. Furthermore, if "she" has children and "he" has children there is bound to be fighting, and woe be unto the stepmother or stepfather who hops in on the side of his own.

This is a second marriage for both of us and I am keeping my fingers crossed. The only thing we fight about is our children and the fights are getting more hurtful. How I wish we had resolved the questions regarding the kids before we decided to marry.

We would have saved ourselves a lot of grief. Please print this letter for divorced people with children who are considering remarriage. It could prevent a second divorce. — Too Late Smart.

Dear Smart: Here it is — and good luck to you, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday I was looking out the window and saw four of the neighbor children standing around a small hole in the ground which they had just dug. They were having a "funeral" for a newborn baby kitten that did not survive. I was horrified when suddenly one of the little boys (about 6 years old) came out of the house with a butcher knife. He stabbed the dead kitten several times and seemed to be enjoying himself immensely.

I was sick all evening. Where does a child get such ideas? Should I tell his mother? — Genevieve Mother.

Dear Mother: Where? Probably from television. By all means tell the boy's mother. She should have this information so she can keep an eye on him. Maybe next he'll decide he wants to do the same thing to a live kitten — or his little brother.

Kennedy Tale Costs Million

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mrs. Joseph Kennedy has received $1,525,000 from Doubleday and Co. for her autobiography. It was disclosed Wednesday.

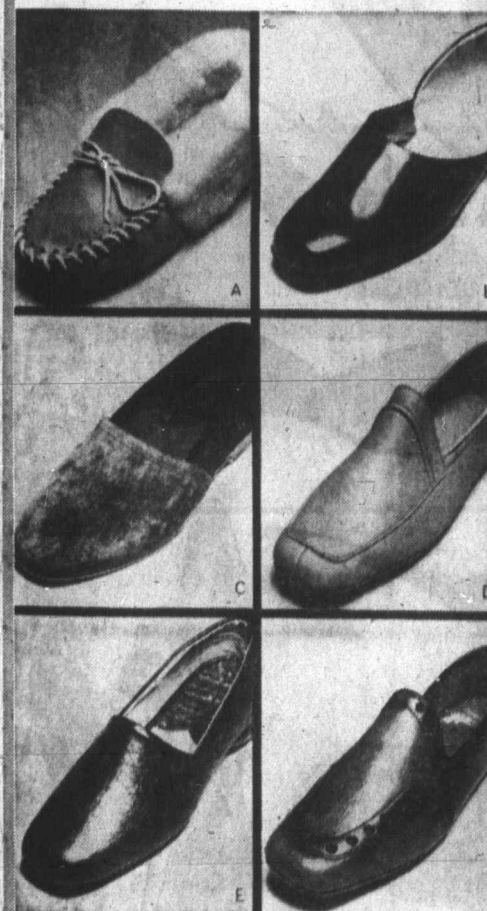

A spokesman said the mother of the late president John Kennedy will donate the money — one of the highest prices ever paid for publication rights to an autobiography — to the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation for the Mentally Retarded.

Mrs. Kennedy, 81, began writing her autobiography a year ago and expects to complete it next year. Robert Coughlin, a former writer for Life magazine, is collaborating.

to cause fatal consequences when eaten by a child of 3 or 3 years although the child could become quite ill.

Children often get into medicines other than headache tablets, including tranquilizers, analgesics and sleeping capsules.

"Take every precaution when you have small children in your home and ask your pharmacist to dispense prescriptions for tablets or capsules in a vial with a child-resistant closure," the article says.

The best protection, however, is to keep potentially dangerous items out of reach of children, preferably in a locked storage cupboard.

Family 'Saved' By Want Ad

YUMA, Ariz. (UPI) — Marie Savinon, the 18-year-old "Miss X" who advertised for a husband so she could keep her brothers and sisters together, has chosen a Lebanese pre-medical student for her mate out of hundreds of proposals received since Monday.

The pair tried to get married Wednesday at a chapel at Winterhaven, Calif., but the girl did not have the required birth certificate.

"He is not well to do," Miss Savinon said of her future husband, Immond "Bob" Katton, 22. "But he is the most honest one, the one person who is right for me."

Miss Savinon, and Katton, a foreign exchange student living in Phoenix, obtained the required blood tests at a Yuma laboratory Wednesday morning.

The plight of "Miss X" was disclosed in a Phoenix newspaper Monday. She said she had been told by an attorney the only way she could keep her family together was to get married.

Miss Savinon's father is dead, her mother severely ill, and she has been forced to care for her sisters, ages 2, 4, 13, and 16. She said she wanted to marry a man with "means and good character" who would take care of them.

'Utter Rubbish'

LONDON (UPI) — A Buckingham Palace spokesman Wednesday dismissed as "utter rubbish" a report published in the United States that Princess Anne and her mother, Queen Elizabeth, were "at odds over the Princess' alleged desire to marry a commoner."

"This report, wherever it originated, is completely untrue. It is utter rubbish," the spokesman said. "It is pure speculative gossip."

The report, by columnist Earl Wilson said the queen objected to Anne's wish to marry Richard Meade, a 25-year-old Olympic horse rider.

It said the queen refused to bestow the title of princess royal on her 21-year-old daughter unless she abandoned her alleged intention to marry Meade, a long-standing friend and riding companion.

The princess is herself a skilled horsewoman, recently named sportswoman of the year. She has been mentioned with increasing frequency as a possible member of Britain's Olympic team at next year's games in Munich, West Germany.

Princess Margaret, the queen's younger sister, gave up plans to marry a commoner, Group Capt. Peter Townsend, in 1955 in the face of strong opposition within the royal family. She later married photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones.

Earlier, British champion show jumper Harvey Smith said he thought the princess was "nowhere near Olympic standard" as a horsewoman.

"In her own class she is the best there is, but that is nowhere near Olympic standard," Smith told a sportsmen's dinner. "I certainly would not like to see them pick her for the Olympics despite the way the press is clamoring for it. Our sport is hard and precise. It is a professional game."

Smith said comparison of the princess' accomplishments with the top-grade performance necessary in Olympic competition "is like going from the first division to non-league football."

"It even a fourth-rate professional entered the sort of events in which Princess Anne is taking part, he would clear the deck of every prize in every event every time."

But Jane Bullen, a member of Britain's gold medal-winning team at the 1968 Olympics, disagreed.

"She has beaten everyone so far, so she has had to be good," Miss Bullen said. "She has had more international experience than I had before I went to the Olympics." That included defeating people of Olympic standard, the former champion rider said.

Students and Drugs

Tranquillizer for Girls

TORONTO (CP) — A survey on drug use among high school students in North Bay, Ont., reveals that children from better-off homes are more prone to taking certain drugs.

The survey, conducted by Dianne Fejer of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation, also found that students who don't use alcohol or marijuana tend to have better school records.

The survey, conducted last May, was released Wednesday. All 3,147 students in Grades 9, 11 and 13 in North Bay's six high schools were asked to take part. About 82 per cent, or 2,576 students, answered.

The survey took into account the use of 15 drugs ranging from alcohol, tobacco and marijuana to barbiturates, glue and other solvents. Lastic records than those who do.

Alcohol and tobacco were most commonly used with 70.9 per cent of the students having taken alcohol within the previous six months and 47.7 per cent having taken tobacco.

Marijuana was used by 21.2 per cent of the students; LSD by 10.5 per cent; barbiturates by 8.2 per cent; other hallucinogens by 6.5 per cent; tranquilizers by 7.0 per cent; amphetamines by 4.3 per cent; other stimulants by 4.6 per cent; opiates and solvents by 3.5 per cent; and glue by 1.8 per cent.

The survey also found that males tend to use more alcohol, marijuana, tobacco, LSD and other hallucinogens than females. Females use more tranquilizers.

Students who had used alcohol and marijuana in the previous six months, the survey found, more often had fathers who were professionals and managers than students who had not used drugs.

For example, the survey stated, about 27 per cent of alcohol users had professionals or managers for fathers compared with 22.5 per cent of non-users.

Alcohol and marijuana use were closely related, the survey found, stating that almost all marijuana users had taken alcohol in the previous six months.

The survey added it appears that marijuana isn't a substitute for alcohol and that marijuana users are also more often drinkers.

Stockbroker Can Help

VANCOUVER (CP) — A stockbroker may become a newly-widowed woman's best friend, says Elizabeth Cooper, one of Canada's few female brokers.

Women react quite differently to men when it comes to the stock market, says Mrs. Cooper, who moved here from Toronto two months ago and is a broker with Bache and Co. Ltd., and "the woman who becomes a widow really has to rely on someone."

"Often, she suddenly finds herself with a large sum of money from an insurance policy and this new money makes her very vulnerable."

Many people, some of them unscrupulous, approach a widow with investment propositions, Mrs. Cooper said, but the best thing she can do is leave the money in the bank until she has taken the time to decide what course her life will follow.

"It takes a while for most women to realize what they are going to do—go back to work, travel, stay home with the children."

"What most often happens is that they become income-conscious and invariably wind up with more income than they really need, putting them in a higher bracket than they were in before."

Most men do little to prepare their wives to handle their money alone, Mrs. Cooper said.

WHAT DO YOUNG MOTHERS TALK ABOUT when they get together? Their babies' health and development, chiefly. And one product upon which they unanimously agree is BABY'S OWN TABLETS. Not surprising when you consider that mothers have been using Baby's Own Tablets for over 60 years. You see, a baby's tummy upset, simple colic, fever or fretfulness is often caused by irregularity. Particularly at teething time, Baby's Own Tablets are specially made for these occasions. They soothe the pain... while they work gently to relieve the cause. Reformers Aim At Expropriation VANCOUVER (CP) — Final recommendations for overhauling expropriation powers in British Columbia statutes will be made to the government this month by the B.C. Law Reform Commission, commission chairman David Fulton said Wednesday.

He said the proposals are being designed to give a "better deal" to those whose property is expropriated.

He said the commission's recommendations will be based on the theory that existing expropriation powers make it too easy for government departments, agencies and crown corporations to expropriate.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Vancouver Better Business Bureau, Fulton said the commission's expropriation study is nearly completed. He said a report will be submitted to Attorney-General Peterson this month, in time for legislative action, should the government approve, at the 1972 session of the legislature.

The former federal justice minister later told reporters he expects the recommendations will advocate one statute outlining the circumstances in which expropriation may take place, the procedures to be followed, and naming the bodies that have expropriation powers.

This statute would replace the "multiplicity" of expropriation powers now scattered through B.C. statute books. "There may be reasons for such authorities as B.C. Hydro or the highways department having separate statutory expropriation powers," Fulton said, "but in principle we are in favor of one statute and one tribunal for dealing with expropriation cases."

Rapid Rise

Ex-U.K. Envoy Hails Malawi Spirit

By GEORGE INGLIS
Colonist Reporter

The African nation of Malawi has vaulted from grinding poverty to the threshold of solvency in seven years, former British high commissioner Thomas Tull, CBE, DSO, told the Colonist in an interview Wednesday.

Tull, whose actual retirement had come at midnight Tuesday while sleeping in the Empress Hotel, said the struggling nation, which owes its rise to world assistance and the influence of Prime Minister Hastings Banda, has passed a bill declaring the end of budgetary aid within the next year.

"Since there are only the people and the soil," Tull said, "agriculture has been exploited fully, sometimes too quickly, in order to gain exportable products."

Tull, whose biography reads like an adventure novel, has been a pilot in India's Air Force, a member of Wingate's legendary parachuting "chindits," and his long diplomatic career has included being "interned" in the embassy in Cairo in 1956, and posts in Switzerland, U.S., Copenhagen, South Africa, before being appointed as second high commissioner since Malawi (formerly Nyasaland) won independence in 1964.

Like so many emerging nations in Africa, Malawi has a one-party system of government but "the built-in democracy of the African people" has kept it productive and volatile, he said.

Main products of Malawi

are tobacco, tea, ground nuts and maize. Newest crop experiments being conducted by the British are in rice-growing.

Canadian aid has been little in evidence in the country where the U.S., British, Nationalist Chinese, Israel and the World Bank International Development Agency have all been trying to help the nation of four million blacks get off their economic knees, Tull said.

He said the Europeans, about 8,000 strong (7,000 British) own many of the larger tea and tobacco plantations, and play a vital role in providing employment.

He said the nation, which also numbers 11,000 Asians among its citizens, has no racial problems at all.

Health facilities need much improvement, he said, and schooling needs some upgrading, but Malawians are zealous in desiring education for their children, making the acquisition of education the major driving factor in development, for the individual families.

"The Johnson brothers," two husky westcoast Canadian lumberjacks, helped install two sawmills in Malawi, under an aid agreement, and Canadian railway locomotives have been purchased by Malawi with loan money from the World Bank.

Tull said the one asset which has not been exploited yet is the huge Malawi Lake, which covers about half the land mass, and the move toward creating tourist facilities is just beginning, and should grow when big air-strips are built.

Malawi has problems with another merging nation, Tanzania, over whether the boundary between the two countries runs down the centre of the lake, or on the Tanzania shore of the lake. Tull said he has great confidence in the longevity of the Commonwealth, especially with the proud participation in her activities by such new nations as Malawi.

The former high commissioner, who said he will always work for the good of Africa's emerging nations, left Victoria Wednesday to visit Philadelphia, where he formerly served as consul-general, before returning to England and retirement.

Stewart Dispute Bars Hopeful

ATLIN (CP) — Peter Curran has withdrawn from the municipal council race in Stewart district in northern B.C. Curran said he withdrew because he has a continuing dispute with the municipality over a business licence which may end up in court. He said the Municipal Act prevents anyone with "a disputed account" from running for municipal office.

Kosygin's Visit Sparks Inquiry

TORONTO (UPI) — The conduct of both the public and the police during an ethnic demonstration against Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin here Oct. 25 will be the subject of a public inquiry, it was announced Wednesday.

Violence flared on several occasions during the demonstration, held in front of the Ontario Science Centre where Kosygin was giving a speech to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. At one point police used horses to keep order.

In the days that followed, the demonstration there were several allegations of police brutality.

Last Monday the Toronto Police Commission asked the provincial government to hold the inquiry, saying its own impartiality might be questioned and that its power to summon and compel attendance of witnesses was unclear.

In announcing the inquiry, provincial Attorney-General Allan Lawrence expressed disappointment at the commission's unwillingness to hold its own inquiry. He said the provincial inquiry would be conducted by Judge Anthony Vannini, a county and district court judge from Sault Ste. Marie.

No date was given for the start of the inquiry.

Joan's Visions 'Not Spiritual'

LONDON (UPI) — Most of the visions for which St. Joan of Arc was burned at the stake probably were the result of an unusual mental ability and in some cases an upset stomach, a British psychiatrist said.

Dr. F. E. Kenyon, of the Wansford Hospital in Oxford, said the 15th century martyr's vision of saints and other figures may have been "a well-documented case of eidetic imagery."

"This is a rather concrete preverbal type of ability occurring mostly in children and young adolescents," he wrote in the medical journal, The Practitioner.

"It can persist for long periods and its projected externally by the observer," he wrote. "If a person had such an image before her, she will turn her eyes to the relevant spot if asked to report on a relevant detail."

Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines the word eidetic as "of or relating to voluntarily producible visual images, having almost photographic accuracy." This, said Kenyon, was almost certainly the case with Joan, burned at the stake in 1431.

But he said, some of her visions may also have been brought on by "gastritis (upset stomach), resulting from her imprisonment, her debilitated state," and perhaps even food poisoning.

"We know her trial had to be interrupted because of illness," Kenyon wrote. "We also know she had visual hallucinations which included Lilliputian figures."

Either way, the phantoms were "probably reinforced" by long periods of fasting and prayer, the psychiatrist said.

Joan claimed the saints she saw in her visions directed her to go to Orleans in 1428.

'A Few Reporters Destroying Paper'

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Desmarais, owner of the Montreal newspaper La Presse which suspended publication Oct. 27, said a small minority of newspaper men was "in the process of destroying" the French-language daily because of their demands.

Desmarais said in a statement that management was "close to agreement" with 350 production-room employees, who were locked out July 19 in a contract dispute.

But now, Desmarais said, the group of reporters "has asked for nothing more and nothing less than effective control of the newspaper."

"If accepted, their demands would make it impossible for the publisher and the senior editors of the newspaper to present certain journalists using the newspaper as a tool to promote their own political ends and opinions."

Afraid to Open Your Mouth?

Bad breath often becomes a real problem for many people with deteriorating dentition... gum trouble, caps, bridgework and especially dentures. Only your dentist can rectify these conditions. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control accompanying bad breath. Steri/sol is specially designed for this purpose. Steri/sol's formulation contains an exclusive, active ingredient called Hexetidine that deprives bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live. In fact, Steri/sol with Hexetidine is so effective, it kills 95% of these mouth-germs within 15 minutes. Then it clings to the mouth and gum tissue to control bad breath for up to 10 hours. No wonder many dentists use Steri/sol. Try Steri/sol with Hexetidine. It costs more than you usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

Rail Line Cut Helps Rebels

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Indian troops inside East Pakistan cut a vital rail line linking the northwestern Dinaipur district with the rest of East Pakistan, government spokesmen said Wednesday night.

The action raised the possibility of a major assault to set up the rebel Bangla Desh (Bangal land) government in that area.

Spokesmen made the disclosure while reporting a lull in the battle in the Hilli sector along East Pakistan's western border, about 180 miles north of Calcutta, where heavy fighting between Indian and Pakistani troops has been raging since last Saturday.

The government spokesmen said the Indian army was occupying positions "from which Pakistani forces were thrown out earlier" and had halted traffic along the railway line north of the town of Hilli.

The disclosure followed reports by Radio Pakistan that Pakistani troops were forced to withdraw Tuesday under attack by Indian soldiers from the town of Pachagarh, located at the extreme northwestern tip of Dinaipur. Indian officials claimed the attack was made by the rebel Mukti Bahini (liberation force) guerrillas.

The report raised the possibility that a co-ordinated drive was under way to isolate Dinaipur from the rest of East Pakistan, thus making it a "liberated" zone from which the rebels' Bangla Desh government can operate.

India supports the Pakistani rebels' battle for freedom from West Pakistan, located 1,000 miles away across Indian territory. The East Pakistanis unilaterally declared their independence last March and since then have attempted to set up their own Bengali government apart from West Pakistan.

In Washington, meanwhile, the U.S. government suspended all future licences for arms shipments to India and cancelled about $2 million in licences already approved. In all, about $11.5 million in commercial exports of military equipment to the subcontinent were affected by the order.

(The move was taken because of the situation in Southeast Asia and the continuation of military engagements" between India and Pakistan, state department spokesman Charles Bray said.

(The U.S. decision was relayed to the New Delhi government through Ambassador Kenneth Keating and assistant secretary of state Joseph Sisco.)

(In Dacca, the capital of East Pakistan, UPI correspondent Joseph Galloway reported that guerrillas bombed the office of the Pakistani people's party (CP) early Thursday. Two persons were injured in the explosion, police said. The PPP, the strongest political party since last December's elections, is most powerful in West Pakistan.)

TIME FOR DECISION

SECRECY AT CITY HALL

By Peter Pollen

I have never been able to understand why so much city planning is done in secret.

Why is the public the last to be told in a planning decision of any magnitude? By the time the voters are aware of what is happening, a concept is very often in its final stages.

It is planning by surprise. Surely public participation is an integral part of any city plan. Without it there is no public awareness and support and without these planning is nothing.

It is true that in certain stages of the evolution of a plan, some details must be kept under cover in order to prevent unscrupulous operators from making a killing by the use of inside information.

But, in the broad sense, people should be told just what is happening. Regular reports should be made available. Secrecy at City Hall should be shunned.

And, for that reason, there should be a wider knowledge of the deliberations of city council's advisory planning commission.

Through the hands of this body, composed mainly of men from real-estate, banking, financing and architectural fields, passes much of the day-to-day business of planning and from it emerge many of the planning recommendations which vitally affect the city — most of which are rubber-stamped by council.

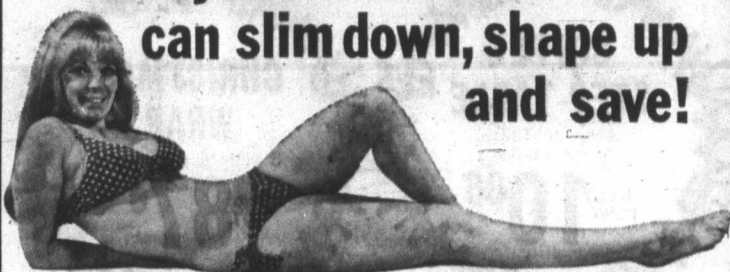

The meetings of this body are completely closed to the public and to aldermen not on the commission. And the minutes are secret!

I believe we should follow the example of Oak Bay and have all development or zoning applications first come before city council. Then, upon council's direction, they should be processed through the planning department for a complete review with recommendations back to council. Council could then, if desired, refer proposals to a standing committee on planning, a committee much more representative of council and the public.

Professionalism and expertise are to be treasured at City Hall but planners, like all civic administrators, elected or otherwise, should never forget that they are servants of the public.

Mar shoots jet of steam to put new life in old hat

John's Job Is Mostly Old Hat

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

They just don't make hats like they used to, said John Mar.

He should know, for he's one of the few men left in town who knows the fine art of blocking and restoring hats. It's a complicated and time-consuming process, he said Thursday, especially when you are working with new hats. "They've got insides like cardboard, and they just break into pieces," he says.

"The dyes come out, and the material's cheap. You have to wash your hands every time you block one, because the dye comes off," he explained. Brown hats are especially bad for losing their dye, he explained.

Mar has been restoring hats, off and on, for about 10 years. He learned how to do it from a man in the B.C. hat shop on Blanshard who, he said, "taught me a few things."

Hats to be restored must first be blocked for size and shape. Then they are steamed. The felt is burnished with a pad to make it smooth. Linings are taken out, dry-cleaned and ironed, and then put back in. The crowns of the hats are also ironed. The last step is water-proofing.

All this is done by hand.

Finished products

and it takes quite a while, Mar said. That's why it's not such a popular trade now. "It takes too much time. You can't do it fast like pressing a garment."

Another problem is getting the right-shaped blocks for hats. "I haven't exactly got all the equipment," he admitted. "They don't make new equipment anymore. Some hats I have to turn down. I can change it a little but I haven't got the block for new styles."

He said that he gets all kinds of styles, from old to up-to-date, some as old as 10 or 15 years. But he prefers to do the old hat "because of their better quality."

"I can't really say how many hats I do," he said. "In summer you get less, in winter you get more. One day you'll get two, the next day you'll get a whole lot," he explained.

But one thing John Mar does know for sure — they aren't as popular as they once were. "They just don't wear hats much, like they did in the old days," he said sadly.

Four Still in Hospital

Hurt Child Released

One of five children injured in a two-car crash last Wednesday at Patricia Bay Highway and Sayward, Saanich, has been released from hospital, hospital authorities reported Tuesday.

Released from St. Joseph's Hospital was Catherine Pope, 5, of 421 Brookleigh, Saanich.

Two of the children remain in poor condition in St. Joseph's Hospital. They are Melissa Wickens, 3, of 420 Brookleigh, daughter of Mrs. Gail Wickens, driver of one of the cars which was carrying the five children. Mrs. Wickens was killed in the mishap. Denise Demeule, 5, of 5443 Ham-sterly, Saanich, is also in poor condition. Authorities at Royal Jubilee Hospital said Sarah Pope, 7, of 421 Brookleigh, is in satisfactory condition.

Army Helps Youth

Brig. Frank Watson, national director of the Salvation Army's correctional department, says there's a real need for services to help young adults on probation.

Consequently, the Salvation Army has started a national program which will help such troubled youngsters.

Watson, in Victoria since Tuesday on part of a tour of correctional work being done by the Army in Alberta and B.C., said that the Army has two homes, one in B.C. and one in Ontario, which look after boys aged 15 to 19.

"We try to upgrade them educationally or give them vocational training so that at the end of their probation period they can get back into the mainstream of society," he told the Colonist Wednesday.

Watson today will open a new covered swimming pool at the Army home in Langley. Called the House of Concord, it has been in operation for about a year.

A similar home in London, Ont., is under construction, and there are two others in the planning stages, he said.

Appointed national director in October, Watson said he was interested "in getting to the grass-roots" and seeing local Salvation Army correctional services in action.

In Victoria, he said, the main work of the Salvation Army is in parole supervision. Wednesday he visited Victoria Provincial Court with Brig. Ivan Jackson, Legal Aid representative in the court. He also went to William Head minimum security prison where Jackson is visiting Protestant chaplain.

Watson, in charge of the Vancouver correctional services of the Army for the past five years, began his career in Victoria. He also attended the national Salvation Army College in Toronto. "I could give you the date," he said, "but that's all ancient history."

He returned in 1967 and worked with the Victoria Citadel Corps at 787 Pandora.

Changes Assured In Slide

Oak Bay council's Committee B Tuesday night authorized changes in municipal playground slides and asked for a study of alternative designs which would be safe for children.

The move was made in response to a letter from Mr. Herbert, 2688 Cavendish Avenue, whose four-year-old daughter fractured her arm Nov. 15 after falling from a high slide at Willow Park. He criticized the lack of adequate railing on the slide prevent such falls, and hard surfacing around slide, which does nothing break a fall.

The committee endorsed municipal engineer Geoff White's recommendations: steps to slides be modified and that grass surfacing place the asphalt, and as that different types of design be explored which would be less dangerous.

In other business, the committee returned the agreement between Oak Bay and the Greater Victoria school board for sharing cost and maintenance of school playing fields to the board further study.

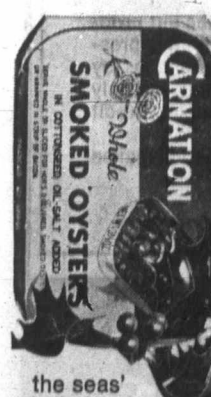

Approved drawings for Carnarvon Park increase by with an amendment to ensure that it meets full regulation.

Decided that a further report on landscaping of new Marina car-park be needed before its landscape plan could be approved.

Approved a 64-space car-park design for the car-park to adjoin the senior citizens centre.

Authorized the spending $450 for the centre's landscaping plan.

Post Office Posting

Christmas mail deadline reminder is placed on outside wall of main Victoria post office Wednesday by maintenance worker Bob Simpson, 2040 Saanich. Postal officials said it is still not too late for overseas mail. However deadline for airmail is Dec. 14.

Changes Assured In Slides

Oak Bay council's Committee B Tuesday night authorized changes in municipal playground slides and asked for a study of alternative slide designs which would be safer for children.

The move was made in response to a letter from John Herbert, 2068 Cavendish Avenue, whose four-year-old daughter fractured her skull Nov. 15 after falling from the high slide at Willows Park.

He criticized the lack of adequate railing on the slide to prevent such falls, and the hard surfacing around the slide, which does nothing to break a fall.

The committee endorsed municipal engineer Geoffrey White's recommendations that steps to slides be modified and that grass surfacing replace the asphalt, and asked that different types of slide design be explored which would be less dangerous.

In other business, the committee returned the draft agreement between Oak Bay and the Greater Victoria school board for sharing costs and maintenance of school playing fields to the board for further study.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 25-year-old man who had, until his arrest, a heroin habit that once cost him $600 in a 12-day period, was sentenced Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court to a total jail term of nine months.

Norman George Urquhart, no fixed address, was sentenced by Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre after pleading guilty Nov. 17 to two charges containing three counts of uttering and then pleading guilty Wednesday to two charges containing four counts of false pretences.

St. Jorre disclosed Urquhart's former heroin habit while discussing a pre-sentence report, and also said Urquhart had been ordered recently by a Vancouver court to pay $675 compensation in a similar case there.

The four Victoria and Saanich charges involved seven cheques worth a total of $855.50. Two banks sent representatives to ask for compensation totalling $635, and St. Jorre added an order for that much to the nine-month jail term.

St. Jorre ordered a six-month jail sentence for Samuel Richard Peter Ralph Mack, 20, address not known, who was found guilty Nov. 10 following a trial on a charge of stealing a car in Victoria "on or about" Sept. 28.

Defence lawyer Douglas Christie made a lengthy plea for probation but St. Jorre noted Mack had previously been put on probation for two separate offences and was still affected by one of those terms when arrested — and it was also for car theft.

In the court section of Judge William Oester, a plea of guilty was entered by Paul Albert Simon, 18, of 405 Quebec, to a two-count Victoria charge of wilful damage and driving while under a licence suspension.

A Victoria detective testified he saw Simon bend a car aerial Tuesday morning in a car firm's parking lot near the police station and discovered Simon had driven to the lot while his licence was under suspension.

He also said Simon told him the aerial was bent because "the car was owned by a friend of his and he was paying him back because he (the friend) bent his aerial." In fact, the car didn't belong to anyone Simon knew.

Simon was fined $50 for the damage and $250 on the driving count.

Horst Dretzkat, 35, of 3021 Shelbourne, was fined the minimum of $100 after pleading guilty to a federal Fisheries Act charge. It concerned a halibut caught Nov. 14 off Victoria by Dretzkat, 13 days after the halibut season closed.

Paul Francis Palmer, 24, of 1018 Fort, and Brian Lee Kivington, 24, of 638 Speed, were fined $50 each after pleading guilty to a joint charge of night-hunting Nov. 15 in the Muir Creek area of Sooke. Court was told they had two blacktail deer in the trunk of their car when stopped at 2:15 a.m.

In the court section of Judge E. F. N. Robinson, a preliminary hearing was waived by Paul Stanley Fletcher, 18, of 1209 Pearce, on a charge of possession of marijuana Nov. 5 in Oak Bay for the purpose of trafficking. He was committed for trial in a higher court and bail was set at $1,000 pending, that trial.

Gerry Ouellette, 25, of 122 Menzies, was fined $500 and given a partial one-year driving ban following his plea of guilty to a charge of driving Sept. 25 in Saanich with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

Mrs. Della Alena Rimmer, 69, of 450 Simcoe, was fined $350 and given a three-month driving ban after she pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving Nov. 7 in the Colwood area.

Gunman Flees With $9,500

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tall, hook-nosed gunman carrying a sawed-off rifle under his raincoat, made off with $9,500 Wednesday in a noon-hour holdup of the Renfrew Street branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Victorian Will Help Manpower

Trudeau Critic Gets Job Task

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Larry Ryan, who can be numbered among those who have criticized the federal government in connection with unemployment, has been hand-picked by the same government to try and do something about the problem.

Ryan, secretary of Victoria Labor Council, is one of eight B.C. and Yukon men appointed by Manpower and Immigration Minister Otto Lang to the job of assisting Canada Manpower with the federal winter incentive work program.

The eight make up an advisory committee that will play a part in the creation and distribution of work projects. Ryan is the only Vancouver Island person represented and one of two labor officials.

Cross Section

With him on the committee are Arthur Phillips, a Vancouver alderman; Mayor William Vander Zalm of Surrey; Dr. Gilbert Young, program chairman of the Vancouver Kiwanis Club; Lloyd Whalen, organizer with the Western Canada Conference of the Teamsters; M. B. Bryson, a Kamloops rancher; Bert Law, Whitehorse businessman, and Russell Brink, a businessman in Vancouver.

The chairman, by nature of

Welcomes Chance

While Ryan openly blames Prime Minister Trudeau's inflation fighting policies for much of today's unemployment ills, he nevertheless welcomes the appointment as a chance to erase some of the harm.

"I think we must now do all we can to combat these (Trudeau's) moves," he said Tuesday night.

He said he will personally be in touch with various social agencies in Greater Victoria in the effort to create job projects. He has a head-start in this direction because he is on the executive of the Greater Victoria Community Chest.

'No Illusion'

The unemployment problem is expected to be particularly bad this winter and the Canadian Labor Congress has named employment its theme for citizenship month in February.

"I feel we must assist in any way we can to create jobs this winter," he said. "I am under no illusion that we are going to solve the problem. The job of the committee, at best, is to try and alleviate it."

"I feel that anything I can do to help the projects to get going will be in the interest of not only the unemployed but labor."

Unskilled Caught

Ryan said the main concern is not with the skilled workers but the unskilled.

"It is the unskilled who tend to be caught in the ebb and flow of the economy," he said.

He feels jobs and community improvement schemes should go hand in hand.

"In my view, there is lots of scope for both in this community."

Majority of Teachers
Submits Resignations

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP) — The Fort Frances - Rainy River school board received the resignations of 84 of its 105 high school teachers Tuesday.

The resignations, if accepted, would be effective Dec. 31. The teachers have been negotiating over wages, seeking increases of about 8 per cent.

The teachers, all from the Fort Frances area, termed the board's offer of a 6½-percent raise "entirely unacceptable."

Starting salaries for teachers now range from $7,000 to $9,500.

$3 Million Jewels for Party

Diamond Liz Out Tonight

Taylor
... police escort

PARIS (UPI) — Elizabeth Taylor will wear $3 million worth of diamonds when she goes to a party tonight a spokesman for the actress said Wednesday.

Along with Miss Taylor and the diamonds will go a heavy police escort to surround the Chateau de Ferriere estate where Baron Guy de Rothschild is giving the party, the spokesman said.

The theme of the event is "Marcel Proust" and de Rothschild asked his guests to dress up in costumes of the 1900s. This year marks the 100th birthday of Proust, who has remained one of France's most influential writers.

The spokesman said Miss Taylor's black dress will be topped off by a headband of 1,000 small diamonds totaling 300 carats, with 25 larger diamonds forming a fringe on her forehead, the spokesman said.

A 20 carat emerald will support a spray of black plumes in turn of century style.

But the focal point of the ensemble will be the $1 million diamond Miss Taylor's husband, Richard Burton, bought for her last year, the spokesman said. It will hang from a black velvet neckband.

Other guests at the party will include the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, the spokesman said.

Victoria Year Otherwise Quiet

Reid Takes Limelight

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

The controversial Reid Centre development proposed for Victoria's Wharf Street was the big issue in a relatively quiet and uneventful year for the city.

For all the commotion in connection with the proposed Reid Centre, and a few other contentious issues, not much happened that could be termed outstanding, with one exception — the city's acquisition of the Ocean Cement property on Wharf Street.

If city council is to be praised for any single achievement, this is it. With the city's purchase of the cement factory site, a stone's throw from the Empress Hotel, Victoria will be able to eliminate one of its major industrial blights.

An added feature is that the city's taxpayers made a good deal in the acquisition of the property. Worth more than $1 million, Victoria's share will come to about $345,000; the remainder will be paid by the federal and provincial governments.

Council also approved plans last spring for a major hotel development downtown, but there has been no sign the project will go ahead.

The $3 million Nordal complex is to be built on the property bounded by Government, Broughton, Wharf and Courtney.

Other major projects carried out by the city this year include the $1.2 million Johnson-Begbie-Shelbourne extension and various other traffic projects, all financed out of the five-year capital budget approved by ratepayers last year.

Council has also commissioned a major downtown planning study to be completed later this year by Harold Spence-Sales, former McGill University architecture professor, now retired in Victoria.

Another visible success was the 700-block Yates beautification project, paid by merchants and the city under a local improvement scheme.

On the minus side of the ledger, council had to take blame for raising the city's mill rate by five mills, which resulted in an average tax increase for property owners of about 4.8 per cent. Considering the increased assessment, Victoria property owners paid an average of $84 more in property taxes this year, compared with 1970.

Also on this year's score-board will be the uncertain destiny of Victoria's Crystal Garden.

Victoria's new $1.8 million Crystal Pool at Central Park was officially opened last weekend.

Still undecided is the outcome of the proposed Reid Centre. The controversy was carried over from last year, and the year before. No solution is expected before March.

Also uncertain is the future of such organizations as the Maritime Museum, the Victoria Conservatory of Music and the Victoria Visitors' Bureau.

Without financial help from the city, the existence of these organizations is placed in jeopardy, and the city has threatened it will cut off the flow of funds.

The year didn't pass without some lighter incidents. The city's cricket players were up in arms when council decided to take away their parking privileges in Beacon Hill Park.

Following a series of confrontations, a compromise was reached. The cricket fans were assured they could continue to park in certain spots.

Mayor Courtney Haddock took exception to the Hare Krishna chanters who still sing and dance in Victoria's downtown.

The mayor said the chanters were disturbing business for a number of merchants, but there was a general outcry from the public and from elected representatives in support of the bald-headed chanters.

The emphasis in city hall's spending during the past 12 months has been on traffic improvement and road construction. This policy has been challenged lately. Whether or not the priorities in civic spending will shift, remains to be seen.

SPEAKS

It costs more money each year to provide the citizens of Victoria with the services they have a right to expect.

To meet these costs, the City must generate revenue from a wider tax base, or the extra costs will be loaded on the homeowner and on the resident citizens.

It is my firm opinion that the resident and the homeowner in the city of Victoria already pay more than their share.

The sensible way is for the City to take its derelict and unproductive land, put it on a revenue producing basis, and thus hold the line against ever increasing property taxes that face us.

It can be done! It must be done! We need decisions not dissension.

Treatment Plant on Sidney's Fifth Street

To Crown Saanich Peninsula's Project

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Reporter

Sewage systems for two of the Saanich Peninsula municipalities have been the main items of progress during the past year.

The main trunk lines for Sidney's sewer system started early this fall and it will lead across the town to a treatment plant on Fifth Street across from Tulista Park.

Although tenders have not been called for the treatment plant, the whole system including pumping stations is expected to cost around the million-dollar mark.

In Central Saanich, where voters passed a sewer referendum last March, tenders have been called for the sewer pipe and pumps to sewer the Turgoose Point area.

To be included eventually in the Central Saanich system will be the Saanichton and Brentwood areas.

A major Sidney project this year was completion of an $84,300 Senior Citizens Centre on Resthaven Drive which won voter approval in a referendum last December.

So far this year the town has spent $70,000 for miscellaneous roadwork and $45,000 on storm drains.

Another major Sidney project is the beautification of the waterfront end of Beacon Avenue which will include a turnaround for cars.

Central Saanich this year received the rights from the provincial government, was also a major project undertaken by council. The municipality's resolution to use revenue from its gravel sales to acquire recreational property was also a major undertaking by council this year.

One of the first attempts to use such revenue ran into difficulty earlier this month when two readings of a bylaw the provincial government, was also a major project undertaken by council.

The municipality's resolution to use revenue from its gravel sales to acquire recreational property was also a major undertaking by council this year.

One of the first attempts to use such revenue ran into difficulty earlier this month when two readings of a bylaw to buy one acre of Brentwood waterfront property for $53,000 became a controversial issue and council decided to ask voter opinion in a referendum Dec. 11.

In North Saanich, primarily a retirement area, planning and development of the municipality were the primary concerns of council.

The municipality's greatest commercial assets are marinas and marina services, which are of great concern to the North Saanich council to ensure they are developed to the benefit of the municipality. Two large marinas are located at Tesum Harbor, and another near Swartz Bay.

A major step for the municipality was the building of a firehall and training of an 18-member volunteer fire crew at Deep Cove.

Priorities Distorted—DoctorHealth Care 'Waste' Cited

OTTAWA (CP) — The future health and well-being of Canadians depends on current efforts to stop waste of power and money, says the head of a federal-provincial study on community health services.

Dr. John Hastings of the University of Toronto, speaking Wednesday to the Ontario chapter of the American College of Hospital Administrators, said health authorities "dare no longer ignore the terrible problems of distortion in priorities, service patterns and utilization."

Also critical are "the waste of increasingly scarce and limited resources of manpower, facilities and money and the failure to modify effectively—let alone eliminate—many of the serious ills which afflict people."

He said his committee will furnish a range of possible answers to problems of providing health care, will estimate the costs and calculate the dislocations and advantages of proposed changes.

An interim report is to be made Dec. 16 or 17 to the federal-provincial health ministers conference and the final report, to include recommendations on types of health centres and roles of governments, is slated for June.

Government hospital and medical insurance programs have placed the emphasis on expensive forms of disease treatment with little attention to promoting health and preventing disease, he said.

Development of alternative forms of ambulatory care and extended care, including health centres, would have to be at the expense of existing forms of service if costs are to be held in check.

That meant "hard political, social and economic decisions" about priorities in spending and allocating resources, and "a realistic appraisal of alternative payment mechanisms for both hospitals and physicians."

He argued that change, for example in the method of paying doctors, "is threatening only to those who are so locked into their roles that they cannot see themselves functioning in any other way."

By emphasizing functions rather than roles, considerable progress could be made to making better use of manpower to meet health needs.

Problems in establishing health centres included licensing regulations, the need for doctors to delegate responsibilities to other workers, the impossibility of making insurance payments to the centre rather than to individual practitioners, and the law that diagnostic tests must be repeated on admission to hospital.

Speaking to a seminar of the annual meeting of the Manitoba health conference, Sheri Litsky of Amherst, Mass., said each province in Canada and state in the United States should set up information centres for hospitals.

She said this would reduce the 100,000 deaths a year in the U.S. resulting directly from cross-infections in hospitals.

Termed Unnecessary

WINNIPEG (CP) — Health institutions have the knowledge to prevent cross-infections from killing patients in hospitals, but won't put the technology to use, a United States consulting bacteriologist said Wednesday.

She said this would reduce the 100,000 deaths a year in the U.S. resulting directly from cross-infections in hospitals.

She said about 16 per cent of the people who die in North American hospitals die from post-operative infections.

Job Bias
By Bell Claimed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission accused the Bell Telephone System Wednesday of blatant, illegal job discrimination against women, blacks and Spanish-Americans.

The independent agency filed several thousand pages of evidence and findings with the Federal Communications Commission as the FCC asked it to do to back up charges first made a year ago. The FCC has scheduled hearings Jan. 31 to determine if the charges are true and whether there is a connection between job discrimination by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and AT&T revenue requirements. The FCC must approve all AT&T rates.

In a 300-page summary, the EEOC claimed that if AT&T had not discriminated against women, for example, it could have produced a net labor cost-saving that would lower overall phone rates by 2 per cent to 4 per cent annually.

Welfare

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm of the British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday dismissed an application by Beverley Cowlishaw which would have forced the director of the provincial rehabilitation department to grant increases in her welfare payments.

Dohm directed that the matter be referred to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson for an interpretation of the British Columbia Social Assistance Act.

A welfare board of review recommended that Mrs. Cowlishaw's payments be increased by $150.50 a month, to $453.50. Welfare Director J. A. Sadler refused to implement the recommendation on the grounds that the review board's decision was contrary to department policy.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Les Desjardins, the St. Boniface M.L.A. who has had an in-out relationship with Manitoba's New Democratic Party government since it came to office in 1968, was appointed to the provincial cabinet Wednesday by Premier Schreyer.

Desjardins, a former Liberal whose support helped the NDP in office for more than a year, was given a portfolio of tourism, recreation and cultural affairs.

Schreyer also announced appointment of The Pas M.L.A. Ron Melnyk as minister without portfolio.

In a re-arrangement of cabinet responsibilities, Attorney General A. H. Macdonald has taken responsibility for a department of consumer and corporate affairs, previously the responsibility of Education Minister Ben Hanuschak.

Former highway minister Joe Borowski termed the appointment of Desjardins an act of "cheap and shameful precedent."

In an interview Borowski said:

"It's a sad day for Manitoba when the loyalty, dedication, and hard work of members are passed over a treacherous, double-dealing two-faced turncoats are awarded with cabinet positions."

Trouble on Two Fronts

Chretien Bars Trip to North

OTTAWA (CP) — An angry Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien refused Wednesday to accept a return air ticket to Cold Lake, Alta., to inspect conditions on the Indian reserve there.

The offer was made by the Cold Lake Native Youth Organization in Chretien's office on Parliament Hill.

About 250 students on the reserve have been kept home from schools in neighboring towns in protest against the reserve conditions and also to reinforce demands for a federal school on the reserve.

Chretien has refused in the past to visit the reserve until the students are back in school. He repeated this stand to the students Wednesday.

Adelard Blackman, vice-president of the native youth organization, tried to present the minister with the airline ticket but Chretien angrily brushed it away.

Chretien, besides already battling with Northern Alberta Indians, now has drawn the ire of Northwest Territories Indians for granting approval for right-of-way for a 36-mile natural gas pipeline.

The territories' Indian Brotherhood said Monday Chretien granted approval for the proposed Pointed Mountain pipeline more than one month before the National Energy Board scheduled a hearing Nov. 23 and 24 to hear objections and criticisms of the pipeline.

The approval given by Chretien before the energy board's hearing indicated the "low priority given of the natives of the north in the plans of the minister and his department," the Brotherhood said.

At the hearing, the Brotherhood moved to block construction because of the still-unsettled land rights question for the 7,000 treaty Indians of the territories raised in the treaties of 1899 and 1921.

The two treaties provided that land be set aside to the extent of one square mile for each Indian family of five. The land was never provided although it was presumably set aside for the purpose.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for Chretien said the minister had agreed to provide the right-of-way for the pipeline provided it could get approval from the energy board for the project.

The company had agreed to follow the strict land-use regulations and to give priority to native northerners for jobs generated by the project.

Guess Who Won't Go To Chretien Dinner?

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Chief Nelson Linklater of Nelson House says he won't attend a dinner tonight for Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien because "I refuse to cast myself in the role of token Indian."

Chief Linklater said Thompson Mayor Brian Campbell invited him only after it was noted there were no Indians on the guest list. Campbell, said Chief Linklater was on the original list.

Stop 'Mistreatment'

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals held Wednesday that some jailers at Attica state prison committed "barbarous abuse and mistreatment" of prisoners after the riot-torn prison was recaptured by state forces.

The court ordered that violations of the constitutional rights of the prisoners cease. The finding of the three-judge panel came in a reversal of District Court Judge John Curtin of Buffalo, who had denied a petition from a prisoner for an injunction. The petition contended prisoners were subject to "physical abuse, threats and harassment" following the quelling of the convict insurrection there Sept. 9 to 13, and that an injunction was needed to protect prisoners from "further reprisals."

The appeals court ordered the district court to restrain state authorities from "subjecting Attica inmates to physical abuse, torture, beatings or other forms of brutality, or threatening such conduct."

Sewer Containment Area Es tablished

Saanich Applies Brakes to Urban Sprawl

Colonist Reporter

Saanich council focused its attention in 1971 on putting the brakes on urban sprawl, mainly through zoning restrictions, open space preservation measures, and increased emphasis on parks development.

The largely-rural municipality that sprang by Victoria in population this year to more than 65,000, spent much of its time implementing two dramatic 1970 laws — one setting up a sewer containment area, encompassing the already-urbanized southern and western sections beyond which areas may not be sewered in the immediate future, and one setting five-acre minimums on lot sizes in the Blenkinsop Valley and Colquhoun Creek areas.

The aim of both laws is to quell urban encroachment into the still-lush agricultural areas in the northern and eastern extremities of the sprawling municipality.

Much of Saanich council's energies have been expended this year in framing up a new zoning bylaw, which will have a sweeping effect in changing zoning concepts, procedures and stopping gaps in old zoning legislation — a comprehensive study guided by a municipal planning committee under Ald. Frank Waring.

A first for Saanich last year was the hiring of the firm of Pearman and Lindholm of Victoria as the municipality's first full-time legal counsel, with lawyer E. A. M. Patterson serving as chief counsel, assisted by George McKimm.

Another first, this time for the Greater Victoria area, was the takeover of the Cedar Hill Golf Course, the first municipal golf course in the area, and subsequent upgrading of the clubhouse facilities. Takeover took place Jan. 1.

Still on the drawing board, but approved as the 1971 project of the five-year, $1,250,000 program is the Cedar Hill Recreation Centre, estimated at $200,000. Other items completed under Ald. Ed Lum's recreation committee list were Tilcum-Burnside area; Hampton Park senior citizens' centre, and Gordon Head community centre.

Recently, on the recommendation of Mayor Hugh Curtis, council agreed to staff study of the council action needed for extending the municipality's offshore boundaries to 2,000 feet from high water mark, to give control over marinas and other offshore installations.

The most recent first being contemplated by council is a fe deral-provincial-municipal, 60-unit dispersed housing unit, aimed at low income rental housing of a type that will be unique in the area.

This project, being handled at the municipal level by Ald. Mrs. Edith Gunning's lands and housing committee, has run afoul of senior government restrictions, which may necessitate revamping of specifications and re-advertisement for tenders.

One of the final accomplishments of the year was the announcement Nov. 22 by the provincial government municipal affairs department that the federal government loan of $388,300 for municipal works programs had been granted.

● Replacement of 6.3 miles of old water pipe, $775,000.

● Extension to Cedar Hill golf course clubhouse, $27,500.

● Equipment storage building, Cedar Hill park, $53,000.

● Construction and improvements to parks buildings, $52,800.

If the municipality shows good faith in carrying out its intended projects, 75 per cent of the money is returned, eventually.

Saanich council is also awaiting approval on a $280,000 grant under the federal-local initiatives program, aimed at providing employment through community projects — roadside brushing, park works projects, beach access construction, etc.

Blasting helped widen Esquimalt Road at Macauley intersection

Esquimalt Tries for Optimum Value

By BROCK KETCHAM
Colonist Reporter

Esquimalt's main thrust during 1971 has been to give its taxpayers optimum value for the tax dollar.

Council has quickly seized any opportunity to get municipal projects off the ground at the least cost to its taxpayers.

Agreements have been entered into by council with its senior governments and the defence department.

In one case, Esquimalt set a precedent in the Capital Region by agreeing to share maintenance costs of school playgrounds with the Greater Victoria school board. In return, the municipality gets part-time use of the facilities.

Maximum use is therefore made of existing playground facilities by both sides at little cost.

Projects approved by Esquimalt council are aimed to curb unemployment, even if only to a minor degree. At the same time, the projects, including parks and street improvements, benefit Esquimalt residents.

A plan used by council to finance its share of the projects has been to defer a portion of the costs to its 1972 budget.

On March 1, 1971, council decided to seek a low-cost $90,000 loan from the federal government's special loan development program for road reconstruction. In addition, council agreed to obtain $100,000 from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for interception of domestic sewage and division into the regional system.

The projects tackled by the municipality with the $190,000, which included resurfacing of portions of Esquimalt Road and Lampson Street and interception of sewage in the Panhandle area, now are about 80 per cent complete.

Esquimalt council, during September, was also quick to take advantage of the provincial government's "certificate of opportunity" program.

In the program, the province shares 50 per cent of salaries of persons hired who have been on welfare for three months or more. Esquimal approved hiring of 12 persons and projects include improvements to parks.

Out of four persons hired so far, two are working in Saxe Point Park and the remainder in High Rock Park. Esquimalt's share in the program totals roughly $27,800.

At a special meeting Nov. 8, council approved projects which would take advantage of the current federal-provincial job-boosting program. B.C.'s share of the federal funds is $21 million, which the province administers.

Projects are high in labor content and low in capital. Since the federal government provides a rebate of 75 per cent for labor costs, municipalities would find the projects inexpensive.

Esquimalt has submitted an application for federal approval for its projects and is still awaiting an official reply.

The municipality and the defence department recently agreed on cost-sharing arrangements for accepting each other's sewage in two areas.

Sewage from the married quarters at Signal Hill would be accepted into the municipal trunk. In return, municipal sewage from the Beatty Street area would be accepted into the DND system.

That's just a small example of how amiable relations between council and the DND have saved both sides money.

CTION: Wednesday's answer — Movie duets involving Bob Hope were

Thanks for the Memory in the movie Big Broadcast of 1938 and Two Sleepy People in the movie Thanks for the Memory. And he sang both with Shirley Ross. Take a week to sort it all out.

Today's question returns us to the series wherein I name a number of movie stars who appeared in one movie, and you name the film. Give the title of the multi-star film with Anne Baxter, Bette Davis, Celeste Holm, Garry Merrill, Marilyn Monroe, Thelma Ritter and George Sanders. Answer Friday.

C-700 p.m.—KVOS completed Billy Graham's Texas meeting (beginning); now KIRO starts item 1.
C-730—A repeat of the cartoon Winnie the Pooh and the Honey Tree.
7:30—Return of the PBS series Christmas Crafts.
8:10-10—The off-delayed start of a series of CBC Financial Post hours on the Canadian investment scene—Investment.
CABLE 10-1:00 p.m.—Island Hobbyist, rock carving; 7:30, new feature for You and the Law, with Saanich police; 8:00, Florida Creations, with Rosemary Wormald; 8:30, Project Travel; 9:00, Canadian Forces Pacific; 9:30, Canada Forum and the Jaycees, with Victoria election candidates.

9:00 a.m.—Pury at Furnace Creek (fairish 1948 Indiana-massacre salute), Victor Mature. In a word, it's a floxy movie. Day-4.

12:45 noon—Salute for John Citizen (1942 English family drama), Stanley Holloway. As the masochistic schoolboy said, Get me to the birch on time—6, 8.

4:00 p.m.—Naked Alibi (1945 police action), Gary Merrill, Chuck Connors, Sterling Hayden, Gloria Gra-hame, Gene Barry. Or as the Adams Family said, Get me to the Lurch on time—7.

5:30 p.m.—The Man (1943 Lay Talbot, detective). Would you believe Talbot got one vote in our Name Your Favorite Stars contest?—13.

C-9:00—Impossible Years (almost-impossible 1960s teens comedy), David Niven, Lola Albright, Ozzie Nelson. Then there was the crippled canary who sang Get me to the perch on time—7, 12.

C41:30—Sign of the Ram (hopeless 1955 Hun), Jeff Chandler, Jack Palance. The real sign of the ram is Love Love—7.

11:50—Gentle Gunman (good 1952 Ira Rana, today's best film), John Mills, Dirk Bogarde—2.

C42:00—Love in a Goldfish Bowl (fairish 1961 teen stuff), Tommy Sands, Fabian. Theme song of the Air-Sea Rescue guys is Get me to the pink on time—4, 8.

1:05 a.m.—Guerrillas in Pink Lace (1964 George C. Scott, war). I don't want to hear Stanley Holloway singing and I don't mean Get Me to the Church on Time, I mean Albert and the Lion—42.

10:00 a.m.—An FM repeat of a special about the Canadian oceanographic vessel Hudson—CBU-FM (105.7).
6:30 p.m.—From tonight on, all Victoria Cougars games in the Western Canada Hockey League will be broadcast. First at Brandon—CJVI (900).
8:00—A. Nijmegen—orchestra concert, including Respighi's Pines of Rome—CBU-FM.
8:00—Encore is about a 1969 Swiss murder trial, conducted under old Roman law—CBU-FM.

The Canadian Radio-TV Commission announced Nov. 26 it had approved the company's application to set its monthly fee per subscriber at $5 compared to the present $4.50.

Company president G. M. Davis told the Colonist Wednesday the firm's 3,000 subscribers in Langford, Colwood, Metcheson and Sooke will be notified by letter in mid-December the increase will start Jan. 1.

At the same time, he said Langford-Sooke Cablevision has virtually completed a $15,000 parabolic-screen antenna system on Mount Helmcken and this year has added 30 miles of cable to its system, making a total of about 90.

David said the parabolic-screen antenna is designed to improve color reception on all channels and to ease interference problems, particularly those on Channel 11.

He also said the antenna "will enable us" to work out an arrangement with Victoria Cablevision Ltd. for addition to the Langford-Sooke system of the Victoria firm's Channel 10 programs. This will go into effect some time next year and the channel on which the Cable shows will be seen has not been determined.

Following a seven-year lapse, the Inter-Scholastic basketball tournament will be renewed this weekend at Victoria High School.

Six teams, including Britannia of Vancouver and Port Alberni, are entered in the three-day event which gets under way tonight. Vandals Plague Mayfair

The spirit of Ebenezer Scrooge has been stalking the Mayfair shopping plaza for the past 10 days.

Victoria police reported Tuesday that merchants at the plaza, who traditionally observe the holiday season with Christmas lights and decorations, have suffered a wave of petty thefts and vandalism.

Most recent theft occurred overnight Monday when a Christmas display consisting of a steel frame, plastic bell and 12 lights worth $75 was stolen from the plaza.

Overnight Friday, police said, a red plastic bell and 12 lights worth a total of $22.80 were stolen.

During previous nights, police said, fluorescent lamps were thrown from the plaza's clock tower, numerous Christmas lights were removed and broken and ornamental shrubs were ripped from planters.

Police said they are paying particular attention to the plaza on their routine patrols and investigation is continuing.

M.V. Chesnut Rest Essential

Any of my fellow gardeners who have ever suffered from insomnia will know only too well how human health can suffer when you don't get a proper night's sleep. All living creatures must have a rest periodically — humans, animals, birds, insects, snakes, fish and plants. When a tree drops its leaves in the autumn, for instance, it is taking a well-earned rest, recharging its batteries for the work ahead next season.

Not every plant drops its leaves, of course, but even the evergreens have a similar, although not so obvious, resting period.

The plants we call herbaceous perennials — the peonies, delphiniums, Shasta daisies and the like — die back to the soil line when they take a rest through the winter, making new growth from the roots in the spring. Tulips have their dormant period in midsummer — a time of severe drought in their native land — and awake only when the soil turns moist in the fall, but on awakening, they make growth only at the roots, delaying topgrowth until spring.

With another class of plants such as the evergreen trees and shrubs, there is no dying down or loss of foliage; the plant simply stops growing while it takes its annual rest.

With houseplants in particular, it is most important to remember that nature intends every plant to take a rest.

The worst thing you can do for a pet plant is to ginger it up with fertilizer and keep it growing when it wants to pack up and quit for a while. This is like keeping a sleepy child up long after its bedtime.

Complete or partial dormancy usually follows a period of active growth, ordinarily soon after the plant quits blooming. Some plants put up obvious signals such as the loss of leaves or the yellowing of the leaf tips. Others simply slow up, standing still and quietly drooping, making no new growth and, of course, no flowers.

The tuberous houseplants which bloom during the summer months — gladioli, tuberous begonias, achimenes — quit blooming in the late summer or fall. When no new flower buds appear, the trick is to "wean" the plant gradually, cutting down on its water a little at a time until the topgrowth is dead and dry.

The safest way to store these bulbs through their dormant season is to leave them in their pots of soil; begonias and achimenes in a cool corner of the basement, gladioli at ordinary room temperatures. Gladioli should have just a little water while resting — say, about half a cupful once a month.

Most houseplant ferns have a semi-dormant period in winter, and it is important to keep the soil just a little on the dry side through this period, although it should never be allowed to become bone dry throughout. Too much water at a time when the roots are inactive will rot the delicate root hairs. The Maidenhair fern is especially vulnerable this way; every spring I get letters reporting the loss of beloved ferns through over-watering in winter.

At one time it was the custom to dry off and rest amaryllis plants from October to January. Now many of our amaryllis bulbs are imported from Africa, and unlike the Dutch kinds, these plants are almost evergreen, without any clearly defined resting period. With these Africans, maintain normal watering and feeding until the plant itself signals the need for a rest by turning its leaf tips yellow; this may happen any time of the year, and not necessarily every year.

Ordinary geraniums take their rest in winter and will grow happily in a sunny window of a very cool room with barely enough water to keep the leaves alive. Geraniums can be made to bloom in winter by picking off all the flower buds in summer, but in this case they need dryish soil for about three weeks in July to slow them up a little. Fancy geraniums of the Maxima Washington type are rested in July. Young geraniums being grown from slips don't need any rest and are kept growing all winter.

Art Buchwald Lawyers Love Nixon

WASHINGTON — A while back I wrote an article in favor of no-fault insurance laws, which provide for people to be compensated for automobile accidents without the expensive process of litigation.

To no one's surprise I received about 100 indignant letters from lawyers telling me I was trying to take the bread out of their mouths.

Well, I have good news for the legal profession. Whatever fees they lose on no-fault insurance, they will make on President Nixon's Phase II economic plan.

As a matter of fact, no matter what happens to the economy, lawyers stand to gain the most from whatever Nixon and his advisers have in store for the country.

This realization dawned on me when I tried for three days to get through to a lawyer friend of mine named Branch Brewmaker. Every time I called, the line was busy, so I decided to go over to his office to find out if he was all right.

Was he all right? He was absolutely dancing around his office. "It's beautiful," he cried. "It's a lawyer's dream."

"What do you mean it's a lawyer's dream?"

"Phase II. No one understands it."

"No one?"

"No one," Brewmaker chuckled. "My clients don't understand it, I don't understand it, no one in the government understands it. Do you have any idea of what this means in legal fees?"

"I guess it must mean something or you wouldn't be bouncing up and down on your couch in your stocking feet."

"Remember six months ago? How lousy I told you things were for lawyers? Well, everything has changed. Thanks to Nixon we will soon own the world."

"Brewmaker, I can understand a certain amount of elation, but why are you throwing $5 bills out your window?"

"I'll show you why," he said, jumping off the couch. He went over to his intercom.

"Miss Ramsay, whom do we have on 'hold'? Minnow of Minnow Ear Plugs, Inc.? Good, put him on..."

"Hello Minnow, Brewmaker here... What's that? You want to know if you can raise the price of plastic ear plugs? I can't tell you off-hand, but I'll find out for you..."

"What's my fee? The usual $100 an hour... Right, I'll get back to you as soon as I have the answer."

Brewmaker hung up. "Now watch this," he said to me, placing a clock in front of him. He dialed a number. "U.S. government? I wish to speak to someone in charge of raising the price on plastic ear plugs... No, don't hurry... I'll hold on."

An hour and a half later Brewmaker had yet to find anyone in charge of ear plugs. He said to me, "It usually takes about three days to get anyone to talk to me."

He laughed. "Then it takes another three days to explain the problem. Then they always demand more information. Then I have to go over and see the guy."

"It takes a half day to find him and a day to get in to see him. Then when I finally do, it turns out he's the wrong guy, and I have to start all over again."

"And all the time the clock is ticking," I said.

"I've had 130 cases since Phase II started and I've yet to get an answer out of anyone in the government on what my client can do. My phone is ringing day and night with desperate businessmen asking for guidelines. The only thing I can do is put them on the meter."

"Nixon's been good to you," I said to Brewmaker.

Brewmaker's secretary came in. "Mr. Saladsch of Saladsch Corkscrews has just hit a cost of living councillor on the jaw, and wants to know if you'll defend him."

Brewmaker shook his head sadly. "I told Saladsch not to appear at the cost of Living Council without a lawyer. But I guess I can't blame him. If I made corkscrews and tried to find out from the government what I could charge for them, I'd eventually hit somebody too."

Comedy Coming

If you'd like a hint as to the ABC fall '72 lineup, give a look at the January-debuting ABC Comedy Hour. James Duffy, president of that network, tips that some of the comedy, variety specials to be alternating each week with Kopy Kala will be used as spin-offs for weekly series. He specifically mentioned the Allen King and Danny Thomas comedy Hour offerings as having strong series potential. Also, the Twentieth Century Foxes, a nostalgia hour featuring June Allyson, Edgar Bergen, Dinah Carroll, Pinky Lee, and — would you believe — Johnny Ray! Duffy is convinced that comedy will be the thing with TV viewers, and he hopes the new weekly variety offering will punch holes in the formidable competition supplied by CBS and NBC on Wednesday nights.

HERE'S GOOD NEWS FOR Henry Fonda fans: There's a chance The Smith Family might get a second chance even though it's been taken off the ABC January lineup. Plans call for the network to use up the eight remaining episodes already committed for this spring, and that should be the end of that. "Unless," ABC's Jim Duffy said, "the series proves to have a great response with audiences this spring. In that event, we might possibly recommit it for the following January. We don't consider it dead forever. We simply didn't have a place for it on this winter's new schedule," so, Smith Family fans, it'll be up to you.

Interesting clause Johnny Carson wanted inserted in his NBC contract before he'd make a permanent move to the west coast: An assurance he wouldn't have to perform during earthquakes.

New York reports that Los Angeles plastic surgeon Dr. Richard Grossman flew to Manhattan for consultations with Jackie O. And in Hollywood, David Janssen and Buddy Greco's estranged wife, Dani, are doing the social scene together.

Actress Ina Balin was the leader of a keep-fit group among the team filming NBC's December 3 World Premiere: Desperate Mission during its Durango, Mexico, location. And she reports the most avid disciple of her yoga-ballet exercises was 255-pound, six-foot five-inch "Rosie" Grier. That, I'm sorry I missed, seeing that famed former football player on his tippy toes for ballet manoeuvres.

Timing's Everything

We get what we pay for. Most often, the good things in life require payment in advance. On the other hand, for the bad things, we never stop paying; their bills are sent us regularly, every after.

Love is paid for in advance, by our sacrifice and our service. For lust, we will pay later, in remorse and regret.

Peace is paid for, in advance, by working hard at mutual trust and confidence. War's price will be paid later, by death and destruction and the legions of the homeless, the shattered, and the embittered.

Years ago, a wealthy British family went to the countryside for a weekend holiday. After the Theterson conference, Sir Winston Churchill was stricken with pneumonia. One of Britain's best scientists was sent to try to save the prime minister's life. He turned out to be Sir Alexander Fleming, the discoverer of penicillin.

Later, Churchill said: "Rarely has one man owed his life twice to the same rescuer." It was Sir Alexander who had saved Sir Winston in that pool!

Winston was saved the first time because Alexander had a perfect sense of timing. And Alexander became a scientist because Winston's family understood, and acted precisely when it had to.

Great raconteurs owe much of their success to a sense of timing. To feel instinctively how much of a pause there should be before one delivers the punch-line, how to pace the various stages and phases of a story — this is the gift of noted orators. It is all a matter of timing.

Similarly, what separates the great from the only ordinary athletes and performers, is often but a single step. One step ahead — and this, too, is the result of proper timing.

And in the truly serious moments of life, timing is of the utmost importance, as well. Often, even a mercurial deed loses much or all of its value because it is poorly timed.

What good does it do to summon the fire-fighters if we have waited to watch the building's destruction? Of what value is a postponed visit to a sick friend, if we arrive as he breathes his last?

The true value of an act is often measured principally by the time when it is performed.

We pay a price for everything. But most of all, for not knowing when to act. The love we plan to confer may lose all of its meaning if we're not ready to offer it now.

Fat Envelope Contained Stunning Gift

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

It was a pretty fat envelope that came to the Colonist the other day, but, since it was addressed just to the paper, the woman in the mail office put it through the automatic letter-opener along with all the others.

When it came out the other side, opened, she noticed there was another envelope in it marked simply, 500 Fund.

She took the envelope out. She removed the contents — $500 in crisp $20 bills.

There was no name, and no marking other than that of the fund.

It's almost enough to make you believe in Santa Claus. In fact, we're wondering if that jolly old elf didn't make an advance visit to Victoria to drop this off in the mailbox.

Whoever did it has given a wonderful Christmas present to destitute families. They'll be able to enjoy a turkey, have a Christmas tree, or give presents to each other.

For a large number too, it will mean they'll be able to buy some of the basics. New shoes for the kids, a jacket with warm lining for winter, some extra groceries.

Christmas could be bleak for many people this year. More people have been laid off, and young people just entering the labor market are having a tough time getting steady work.

Welfare officials have told the Colonist that there are almost 2,000 people who could really use some extra help this Christmas, let alone $500.

Whoever gave that $500, thank you very much. It's greatly needed and greatly appreciated.

Contributions, large or small, will help Victoria's underprivileged to have a Merry Christmas.

New guillotine for tax debate sharpened by divided foes

OTTAWA (CP) — The government reached into its bag of rules Wednesday and came up with House Rule 75-C to close off debate on its massive tax bill.

House leader Allan Rock told the Commons the rule, which he said he intends to invoke today, would allow only four further days of detailed clause-by-clause study of the bill.

He also was careful to point out that the rule he was invoking was not closure — which is House Rule 33.

Even so, 75-C may be more stringent in its effect. Under 75-C, the government may specifically designate how much time may be spent completing any one stage of a bill's passage.

Under Rule 33, or closure, time-limit regulations are built in and the rule must be invoked repeatedly for each separate segment of a bill.

Rule 33 also can be invoked unilaterally by the government on 24-hour notice while 75-C is the third stage of a series of closely-defined attempts at agreement between the various Commons parties. It cannot be brought in until these attempts have been exhausted.

The Conservatives immediately charged that the government pulled a driver out of its rules bag when a light iron would do just as well.

But facing a self-imposed Jan. 1 deadline for implementation of the 332-item bill, and with only about one-third of those items passed since debate started Sept. 7, the government opted for the powerful 75-C.

After Wednesday, only third and final reading — generally a formality — would be necessary.

MacEachen's notice of the government's intention to use a 40-minute debate. But those arguments really served to emphasize the divided opposition opinions that paved the way for the government's first use of 75-C.

Generally, the opposition parties let the talk-limiting guillotine go through without much fuss.

But late in the afternoon, some Conservatives staged a House invasion, from behind the curtains, storming the chamber and demanding an immediate vote for an adjournment of debate about an hour ahead of the regular time.

Prosper Boulanger (L — Montreal, Quebec), in the chair, took an opposition raking when he allowed Revenue Minister Herb Gray to rise on

By JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Reporter

The provincial government has put a 6.5 per cent ceiling on wage and salary increases that hospitals may give their employees, it was learned Wednesday.

Spokesmen for Local 180, Hospital Employees' Union, and the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., which now are negotiating new contracts,

said government intervention makes a mockery of collective bargaining.

"Our organization was caught by surprise," said Ray McCready, executive secretary of HEU. "We will prepare ourselves for a fight — and it will be the government that will turn our hospitals into a battlefield in the fight against inflation."

The government, which pays 100 per cent of the day-to-day costs of public hospitals, made its position known about one month before the existing union contracts expire.

The 6.5 per cent ceiling is identical to that which Education Minister Donald Bracken has asked school boards to follow in negotiations with teachers.

B.C.'s hospitals employ about 23,000 persons. The wage and salary bill this year likely will be close to $100 million.

A. S. Lightfoot of Campbell River, president of the B.C. Hospital Association, told the Colonist hospitals spend public funds and if 6.5 per cent is

LONDON (AP) — With cries of "shame" and "bloody disgraceful" issuing from packed opposition benches, the Commons approved Wednesday night the Conservative government's proposals for settlement of the six-year rebellion of white-ruled Rhodesia.

Just before the House voted 297 to 209 after heated debate, Prime Minister Ian Smith of the breakaway colony told British television viewers that political advancement by the Rhodesian non-white majority would depend on the way the majority acquitted itself.

He said in an interview broadcast from Salisbury he did not think the blacks were in a position to govern the country at the moment and added:

"What the position will be in 10 or 1,000 years' time I do not know and it is not easy to predict."

To loud protests from the Opposition, Britain's attorney-general, Sir Peter Rawlinson, told the Commons the settlement proposals "now provide for advance to parity and beyond" for the Africans.

On television, Smith said he had a "pretty good idea" the blacks would not be in control in 10 years' time.

NDP, Grits Draw In Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — The major political parties in Saskatchewan failed to gain any ground in two byelections Wednesday.

Liberal Jack Weibe, 35, a farmer from Herbert, led all the way in Morse, a south-central riding that was made vacant when Thatcher died July 23, a month after the Liberal party was defeated.

Weibe defeated Ed Nasir, 32, of Saskatoon, the province's Progressive Conservative party leader, and the NDP's Jim Murdoch, 39, a farmer.

In a two-way fight in Souris-Estevan, New Democrat Kim Thorson, a 39-year-old lawyer

from Estevan defeated Liberal Ian MacDougall, a 43-year-old pipeline company executive, also of Estevan, who had held the seat before the June 23 general election.

Woman's Indian Act Fight

Rights Case to High Court

● Lonely battle for women's rights. Page 33

OTTAWA (CP) — The first case in which the Canadian Bill of Rights has been used to fight discrimination against women, will go to the Supreme Court of Canada, Justice Minister John Turner announced Wednesday.

Indian Affairs Minister

Jean Chretien said later "radical changes" in the administration of Indian affairs will result if the Supreme Court upholds a Federal Court decision on which the test is based.

The decision overthrows a marriage provision in the Indian Act on the grounds that it is discriminatory against women.

The Commons announced that it will be tested in the Supreme Court was taken by Conservative spokesman as an attempt to break the Federal Court judgment.

Indians themselves have been sharply divided on whether or not women should lose their treaty rights, as in the case now, when they marry non-Indians.

Chretien was asked whether the judgment, if upheld, would have a retroactive effect on the hundreds of Indian women who have lost their equity in reserve funds, and their right to live on the reserve or be treated as treaty Indians because they have violated the marriage provision.

The provision has been aimed at protecting the reserve lands from domination by non-Indians.

What Wrong Has B.C. Done?

Nishga Hearing Opens in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia is "an innocent bystander" in the aboriginal rights battle between the federal government and non-treaty Indians, the Supreme Court of Canada was told Wednesday.

What wrong has B.C. done... in carrying out the scheme of Confederation? asked Douglas McKay Brown, appearing in court for the attorney-general of the province.

He is opposing an appeal by the Nishga Indians who are asking the high court for a declaration that they hold Indian title — aboriginal rights — in more than 4,000 square miles of the Nass Valley north of Prince Rupert.

Brown said the Nishga quarrel is with the federal government and that the courts had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

But Mr. Justice Emmett Hall disagreed. He said the federal government seemed to be telling the Indians first to prove their claims of aboriginal rights before talking about compensation for the lands involved.

Only after they had proved a claim to Indian title in B.C. Crown lands whose title was held by the province could they press their claims, said Hall.

The court also seemed unimpressed by Brown's argument that a declaration that the Nishgas owned the land in question would be of nuisance value only.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence observed that Brown should be more concerned that it could be too effective.

Tom Berger of Vancouver, appearing for the Indians, has said that Indian title to the Nass Valley was "not insistent" with crown ownership.

He also has stressed that the Indians are not claiming damages in the action against B.C. They only wanted to establish that their aboriginal title was still valid.

Brown said the Indians could not go to the Land Registry Office in B.C. and file a claim for the land since it now was registered in the name of the crown.

Nor could any money pay-

Love Prime Directive at Duncan Crisis Centre

By ELIZABETH DUNN
Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN—An organization that lists love as one of its guiding principles will soon make its debut in Duncan.

And that debut will assume the form of a telephone number as "Crisis Centre" comes to the Cowichan Valley, eager to lend a helping hand—or voice, to those in need.

Now in its formative stage, Crisis Centre was launched several weeks ago at a public forum sponsored by the Cowichan branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association. Since then a group of concerned local residents have formed an executive and are drawing up their working constitution.

President of the local CMHA, Bob Moss, explained Wednesday that the Crisis Centre has been born because of a need within the Cowichan Valley.

"This will provide an opportunity for people with problems to talk with someone who will listen and who cares," he said.

Moss said that although the Cowichan Valley has a high suicide rate, there was no definite cause to which this could be attributed. "I personally feel that climate is a factor. If you had real problems and felt that life just wasn't any fun, then the steady rain that we have had the last few days wouldn't help."

Another possibility for the high suicide rate, Moss said, was the personal isolation, typical of modern society, that keeps people at a distance through such guises as superficial conversations.

"We need to show more concern for our fellow human beings—the hippies have got something with all this love stuff because there is a lack of warm human relations today," he said.

One symptom of this, he said, was that few people praised their fellow man, or showed any affection towards him. Failing praise or motivation from others, the individual must then rely on his own inner strength—a situation, Moss said, that has made the formation of a Crisis Centre necessary.

"If you run out of your own inner strength, then you have had it."

The CMHA position towards the Crisis Centre, Moss said, was "one of recognizing that, since there will never be enough professionals to pick up the load, lay people have got to develop self-help groups."

Essential for such groups, he emphasized, was an adequate training program. Each of the volunteers who will man the 24 hour crisis telephone line will take a course from professional counsellors, enabling him to better cope with the diverse situations that could arise.

The volunteers, under the presidency of Steve Carreck, now have a list of over 20 persons ready to work in the Crisis Centre. Extra help is needed, however, especially in the over 25 age bracket.

"We have a large number of young people who are interested, and this is very gratifying," said Moss. He added that it was necessary to have balance of younger people with older ones, in order that the two could exchange experiences to better equip them to deal with callers.

Anyone interested in working with the Crisis Centre, which will open in January, could call Carreck at 746-4240.

Salmon Disaster Claimed

Cowichan Joins Protest on Dam

NORTH COWICHAN—The North Cowichan council Wednesday afternoon supported New Westminster city council's stand opposing the Moran Dam proposal.

Two weeks ago North Cowichan decided to reserve a decision on the New Westminster request for support until further information was obtained by the North Cowichan pollution control committee. The recommendation to support New Westminster was made by pollution control committee chairman, Ald. Tom Burge.

Burge said a dam at Moran would wipe out salmon stocks that spawn above the site and the commercial and Indian food fishery catches below the dam would be cut by 50 per cent. This loss would cost $24 million annually based on present wholesale values. Recreational fishery losses were estimated at $22 million annually but a two-year study of this aspect was not yet complete.

"Even if it were possible to get the spawning fish above Moran, and there is no precedent where salmon have been successfully passed over a dam as high as Moran, it seems that the downstream migrants could not be passed over Moran, as apart from the turbines the fish die from a phenomenon akin to the bends human divers suffer when subjected to the sudden changes in pressure."

"About 65 per cent of sockeye-bearing capacity of the Fraser River system is in the large lakes on tributaries upstream from Moran Canyon. Most of these lakes are only partly utilized thus potential for increase of sockeye stocks is all above Moran. Annual loss of potential salmon production would be $71 million," Burge told council.

Burge also stressed that the dam is not needed for flood control because that can be provided by Dykes and a dam would have other major implications on the ecology of the Fraser River delta.

In a letter to council, B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum congratulated council on the decision to have a committee study the question and get some facts before taking any action.

"This is a mature attitude which is entirely too rare in these days of instant protest. I should like to suggest that you wait for the Engage Board report which will be available about March 1, 1972," Shrum said.

"We are doing everything possible to make this the most comprehensive and objective report that has yet been prepared on the subject of electric power in British Columbia. We intend to present all sides of the various controversial issues and then leave it up to the people of B.C. and their elected representatives to choose the option which will confer the greatest benefit on our society," the Hydro chairman said.

After a complaint from ratepayers that Slegg Forest Products Ltd., despite promises, had not done anything to improve its industrial site in the Cowichan Bay area the firm told council that tree planting to screen the operation will be completed by the end of this year.

E. R. Slegg also said, "with regard to noise we have been closing in buildings and making some engineering changes in the equipment."

"One particular conveyor, which has been creating some noise, is now being redesigned. New equipment has been ordered in conjunction with this which should arrive in about six weeks. We are extending the roof over the entrance to the planer mill which should further baffle the hum from that plant. We believe that the changes we are now working on will greatly improve our operation," Slegg said.

A petition signed by 18 residents in the Norcross Road area asked council for support for connection to cable television which had been promised to them for the past three years.

Mayor Gerry Smith suggested a letter to the transport department saying "we should put our support behind these people. I have sympathy with the people on Norcross Road, at Maple Bay and at Crofton—but there is no way that we can force him (operator of the cable vision firm)."

Council accepted with regret Gordon Cameron's resignation from the North Cowichan recreation commission on which he served as a member and chairman for four years.

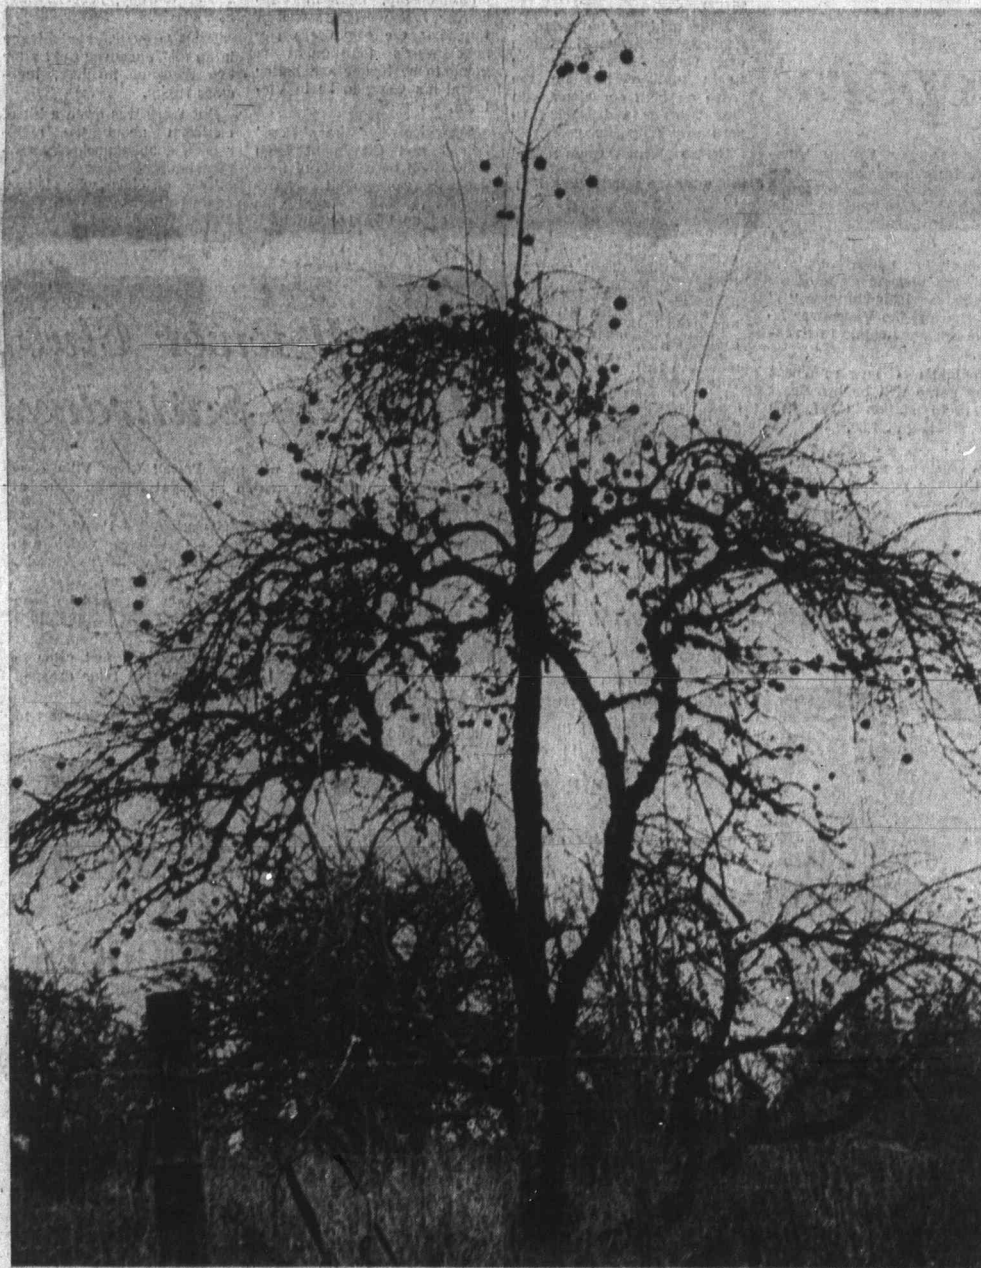

LANDFILL PERMIT 'HERE AT LAST'

PORT ALBERNI—City council in Port Alberni has finally received a permit from the pollution control board for the long-awaited landfill site, 54 acres in the country in the McCoy Lake area.

"Happy Day" said Ald. George McKnight, who has headed up the committee working on a solution to the garbage dump problem for two years.

"It is long overdue" Mayor Fred Bishop agreed.

The city will be responsible for building a road into the landfill area before actual use can begin and must also carry out a number of engineering recommendations to eliminate any chance of pollution.

Nature's Winter Sketch

looked at tree and thought it was worth capturing so others could work out their own interpretation of nature's sketch.

Ferry Mishap Heroes Given Medals

NANAIMO—Three people who dove into Departure Bay to save an elderly couple whose car had fallen from a B.C. ferry have been awarded Nanaimo's silver award of merit.

And meanwhile, the elderly couple from Alberta, who spent days in hospital recuperating from their plunging, have expressed dismay that a B.C. Ferries report has attached no blame to the crew or to mechanical failure.

Highways department employee Herbert Hacking, 53, of 90 Claire Drive, Nanaimo and two bystanders, John Konig, 19, of Vancouver and Cecil McGrath of Kelowna, who jumped in the water to pull the couple from the car before it sank, were voted the medals this week.

Mayor Frank Ney said the men risked their lives as they were only a few feet away from the huge ferry propellers.

He said it is hoped to present the awards at the next council meeting in two weeks.

The B.C. Ferries report saying that no human error or mechanical fault could be determined for the mishap has upset Mrs. William Martin, 75, of East Macleod.

Before the Martins left B.C. She said Wednesday that she and her husband, 82, were driving off the Queen of New Westminster ferry ramp Oct. 20 when the ferry suddenly moved out.

"Now whose fault is that, I ask you?"

Mrs. Martin also said that neither she nor her husband were ever contacted by B.C. Ferries in its investigation of the incident.

Before the Martins left B.C. ever, they submitted an initial claim of $5,836 (for loss of car and other expenses) to C. A. Cavin of the claims office of the highways department.

The pair have been reimbursed for loss of luggage and clothes but no mention has been made yet for personal damages, Cavin said Wednesday the settlement will be negotiated between the department and the couple and he would not comment further.

Both charges faced by Miller were the result of an incident at the Town Centre Motel in Campbell River, Sept. 12 in which a number of packages of cigarettes were removed from a vending machine.

One suspect was shot as he fled by RCMP Constable George Braithwaite, who was injured in the incident.

Ald. Ted Jenkinson pointed out that city council approached the provincial government for amalgamation before the vote ever took place and their request was rejected.

Arnie Duggan also said he felt amalgamation was necessary and that the city cannot progress unless it is amalgamated with the five surrounding improvement districts.

A vote was held on the issue in June, 1970 but failed by less than 1 per cent to reach the necessary majority.

Medland said outside areas are clamoring for more recreational facilities but the city of Nanaimo can't possibly afford them.

Ald. Gertrude Hall said that "we must fight for equalization of assessments. Until we do this it will be an uphill battle to look at amalgamation in any form."

Bert Ogden, business agent for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said amalgamation must have the first priority and charged that city council leadership does not exist.

He said, "I can put up the damndest fight, you've ever seen if I'm elected." He also said that MacMillan Bloedel Harmae pulp mill should be included in any amalgamation plan along with the Hooker chemical plant.

Neither was included in the last amalgamation map.

Hub-city Kiwanis Club president Warner Newton said only amalgamation would enhance the city and end the struggle between residents, developers and others.

Ald. Gertrude Hall said that "we must fight for equalization of assessments. Until we do this it will be an uphill battle to look at amalgamation in any form."

Bert Ogden, business agent for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said amalgamation must have the first priority and charged that city council leadership does not exist.

He said, "I can put up the damndest fight, you've ever seen if I'm elected." He also said that MacMillan Bloedel Harmae pulp mill should be included in any amalgamation plan along with the Hooker chemical plant.

Neither was included in the last amalgamation map.

Hub-city Kiwanis Club president Warner Newton said only amalgamation would enhance the city and end the struggle between residents, developers and others.

Ald. Ted Jenkinson pointed out that city council approached the provincial government for amalgamation before the vote ever took place and their request was rejected.

Arnie Duggan also said he felt amalgamation was necessary and that the city cannot progress unless it is amalgamated with the five surrounding improvement districts.

Medland said outside areas are clamoring for more recreational facilities but the city of Nanaimo can't possibly afford them.

CAMPBELL RIVER — A
Courtenay man, Lloyd Earl Miller, may face a charge of attempted murder as a result of a preliminary hearing in Campbell River this week.

Miller faced a charge of assaulting a police officer to avoid arrest.

However, at the end of the hearing, district Judge Eric Winch held there was sufficient evidence to bind Miller over for trial and said he was recommending to the attorney-general's department that Miller face a charge of attempted murder, which must be heard before an Assize Court.

A second charge of theft under $50 was also bound over for trial.

Both charges faced by Miller were the result of an incident at the Town Centre Motel in Campbell River, Sept. 12 in which a number of packages of cigarettes were removed from a vending machine.

One suspect was shot as he fled by RCMP Constable George Braithwaite, who was injured in the incident.

DUNCAN — Story time is one of the highlights in the daily lives of pupils of the Cowichan Indian co-teacher Fran Wall knows how to keep the youngsters' interest.

Her class of 20 five-year-olds is only part of the nursery school which uses quarters in the St. Catherine's school on Tzouhalem Road.

In the four-year-old class another 20 pupils are enrolled and both classes are held every morning except Saturdays. The afternoons are earmarked for 17 young Cowichan Indian Band members aged three years.

The entire operation is under the guidance of Mrs. Wall. Including her, there are four teachers and teachers'
aides working for the nursery school.
The school started five years ago with a much smaller number of students.

North Cowichan Aldermanic Hope
Money's Worth Demanded

NORTH COWICHAN —
After his recovery from a recent illness aldermanic candidate Robert Evans finally was able to explain his platform this week.

The 47-year-old sporting goods wholesaler is eyeing a one-year term on North Cowichan council in the Dec. 11 election and says he thinks it is time the taxpayers in North Cowichan got their money's worth. He instanced the public works which he said needs much overhauling.

Evans suggested that the city of Duncan Volunteer Fire Department should take over fire protection for the Cowichan Indian reserve, part of which is now covered by the North Cowichan Southend Volunteer Fire Brigade.

"The city gets all the taxes from businesses located on Indian land within the city boundaries and the North Cowichan Southend fire department gets $10 per house,"

Evans said he would not be in favor of an amalgamation between the city and the North Cowichan Southend fire departments because that move, before long, would lead to the hiring of fully paid firemen which would cost about $200,000 a year as against about $50,000 paid now by the city and North Cowichan.

He stressed that he was definitely in favor of joint sewer and water services. Evans feels that roads in the Che-mainus area should be improved and North Cowichan council should lend greater support to Chemainus business people.

A NEW BEAUTY

PARKSVILLE — A tall, attractive brunette, Rose Ellen Lacroix of Coombs, has been crowned Miss Parksville 1971-72 to complete the term relinquished by Christine Toews of Parksville. Miss Toews, who received the beauty queen crown last July, is moving from Parksville to make her home in Winnipeg.

The crowning ceremony was performed by Miss Toews at Parksville municipal chambers during an "open house" which marked the official opening of the new addition and alterations to the municipal office. Among the first to congratulate the new queen were Mayor Ray Young, and Tom Tryon, president of Parksville and District Chamber of Commerce, who arranged the ceremony as the Miss Parksville contest is sponsored by the chamber.

A cheque for $50 was presented to Miss Lacroix by Clifford Leffer, chairman of the Parksville pageant committee.

Rose Ellen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Lacroix and she was runner-up for the beauty queen title in July. She is 18 years of age and her ambition is to be an airline hostess. Rose enjoys meeting people and working with children and has been very active in Girl Guides achieving the highest honor in guiding, the Gold Cord and also the Service Star which is the highest in Land Rangers.
She was one of eight Canadian girls who won a trip to Japan. Keen on sports she enjoys bowling, camping and hiking.

Miss Lacroix says she is very excited about receiving the beauty queen crown, which she will hold until July, 1972.

Victorian Will Help ManpowerTrudeau Critic Gets Job TaskBy DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Larry Ryan, who can be numbered among those who have criticized the federal government in connection with unemployment, has been hand-picked by the same government to try and do something about the problem.

Ryan, secretary of Victoria Labor Council, is one of eight B.C. and Yukon men appointed by Manpower and Immigration Minister Otto Lang to the job of assisting Canada Manpower with the federal winter incentive work program.

The eight make up an advisory committee that will play a part in the creation and distribution of work projects. Ryan is the only Vancouver Island person represented and one of two labor officials.

Cross Section

With him on the committee are Arthur Phillips, a Vancouver alderman; Mayor William Vander Zalm of Surrey; Dr. Gilbert Young, program chairman of the Vancouver Kiwanis Club; Lloyd Whalen, organizer with the Western Canada Conference of the Teamsters; M. B. Bryson, a Kamloops rancher; Bert Law, Whitehorse businessman, and Russell Brink, a businessman in Vancouver.

The chairman, by nature of

Welcomes Chance

While Ryan openly blames Prime Minister Trudeau's inflation fighting policies for much of today's unemployment ills, he nevertheless welcomes the appointment as a chance to erase some of the harm.

"I think we must now do all we can to combat these (Trudeau's) moves," he said Tuesday night.

He said he will personally be in touch with various social agencies in Greater Victoria in the effort to create job projects. He has a head-start in this direction because he is on the executive of the Greater Victoria Community Chest.

'No Illusion'

The unemployment problem is expected to be particularly bad this winter and the Canadian Labor Congress has named employment its theme for citizenship month in February.

"I feel we must assist in any way we can to create jobs this winter," he said. "I am under no illusion that we are going to solve the problem. The job of the committee, at best, is to try and alleviate it."

"I feel that anything I can do to help the projects to get going will be in the interest of not only the unemployed but labor."

Unskilled Caught

Ryan said the main concern is not with the skilled workers but the unskilled.

"It is the unskilled who tend to be caught in the ebb and flow of the economy," he said.

He feels jobs and community improvement schemes should go hand in hand.

"In my view, there is lots of scope for both in this community."

Majority of Teachers Submits Resignations

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP) — The Fort Frances - Rainy River school board received the resignations of 84 of its 105 high school teachers Tuesday.

The resignations, if accepted, would be effective Dec. 31. The teachers have been negotiating over wages, seeking increases of about 8 per cent.

The teachers, all from the Fort Frances area, termed the board's offer of a 6½-percent raise "entirely unacceptable."

Starting salaries for teachers now range from $7,000 to $9,500.

Fat Envelope Contained Stunning Gift

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

It was a pretty fat envelope that came to the Colonist the other day, but, since it was addressed just to the paper, the woman in the mail office put it through the automatic letter-opener along with all the others.

When it came out the other side, opened, she noticed there was another envelope in it marked simply, 500 Fund.

She took the envelope out. She removed the contents — $500 in crisp $20 bills!

There was no name, and no marking other than that of the fund.

It's almost enough to make you believe in Santa Claus. In fact, we're wondering if that jolly old elf didn't make an advance visit to Victoria to drop this off in the mailbox.

Whoever did it has given a wonderful Christmas present to destitute families.

They'll be able to enjoy a turkey,

have a Christmas tree, or give presents to each other.

For a large number too, it will mean they'll be able to buy some of the basics. New shoes for the kids, a jacket with warm lining for winter, some extra groceries.

Christmas could be bleak for many people this year. More people have been laid off, and young people just entering the labor market are having a tough time getting steady work.

Welfare officials have told the Colonist that there are almost 2,000 people who could really use some extra help this Christmas, let alone $500.

Whoever gave that $500, thank you very much. It's greatly needed and greatly appreciated.

Contributions, large or small, will help Victoria's underprivileged to have a Merry Christmas.

75-C

New guillotine for tax debate sharpened by divided foes

OTTAWA (CP) — The government reached into its bag of rules Wednesday and came up with House Rule 75-C to close off debate on its massive tax bill.

House leader Allan Rock told the Commons the rule, which he said he intends to invoke today, would allow only four further days of detailed clause-by-clause study of the bill.

He also was careful to point out that the rule he was invoking was not closure — which is House Rule 33.

Even so, 75-C may be more stringent in its effect. Under 75-C, the government may specifically designate how much time may be spent completing any one stage of a bill's passage.

Under Rule 33, or closure, time-limit regulations are built in and the rule must be invoked repeatedly for each separate segment of a bill.

Rule 33 also can be invoked unilaterally by the government on 24-hour notice while 75-C is the third stage of a series of closely-defined attempts at agreement between the various Commons parties. It cannot be brought in until these attempts have been exhausted.

The Conservatives immediately charged that the government pulled a driver out of its rules bag when a light iron would do just as well.

But facing a self-imposed Jan. 1 deadline for implementation of the 32-item bill, and with only about one-third of those items passed since debate started Sept. 7, the government opted for the powerful 75-C.

After Wednesday, only third and final reading — generally a formality — would be necessary.

MacEachen's notice of the government's intention to off a 40-minute debate. But those arguments really served to emphasize the divided opposition opinions that paved the way for the government's first use of 75-C.

Generally, the opposition parties let the talk-limiting guillotine go through without much fuss.

Prosper Boulanger (L., Montreal, Quebec), in the chair, took an opposition ruling when he allowed Revenue Minister Herb Grey to rise on

By JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Reporter

The provincial government has put a 6.5 per cent ceiling on wage and salary increases that hospitals may give their employees, it was learned Wednesday.

Spokesmen for Local 180, Hospital Employees Union, and the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., which now are negotiating new contracts,

said government intervention makes a mockery of collective bargaining.

"Our organization was caught by surprise," said Ray McCready, executive secretary of HEU. "We will prepare ourselves for a fight — and it will be the government that will turn our hospitals into a battlefield in the fight against inflation."

The government, which pays 100 per cent of the day-to-day costs of public hospitals, made its position known about one month before the existing union contracts expire.

The 6.5 per cent ceiling is identical to that which Education Minister Donald Brocks has asked school boards to follow in negotiations with teachers.

B.C.'s hospitals employ about 23,000 persons. The wage and salary bill this year likely will be close to $150 million.

A. S. Lightfoot of Campbell River, president of the B.C. Hospitals Association, told the Colonist hospitals spend public funds and if 6.5 per cent is

Smith Takes L-o-n-g View To Black Rule

LONDON (AP) — With a series of "bombs" and "bloody disgraces" issued from packed opposition benches, the Commons approved Wednesday night the Conservative government's proposals for settlement of the six-year rebellion of white-ruled Rhodesia.

Just before the House voted 297 to 269 after heated debate, Prime Minister Ian Smith of the breakaway colony told British television viewers that political advancement by the Rhodesian non-white majority would depend on the way the majority acquitted itself.

He said in an interview broadcast from Salisbury he did not think the blacks were in a position to govern the country at the moment and added:

"What the position will be in 100 or 1,000 years' time I do not know and it is not easy to predict."

To loud protests from the Opposition, Britain's attorney-general, Sir Peter Rawlinson, told the Commons the settlement proposals "now provide for advance to parity and beyond" for the Africans.

On television, Smith said he had a "pretty good idea" the blacks would not be in control in 10 years' time.

The Indian affairs minister replies that he would await the Supreme Court decision before making any comment.

Rights Case to High Court

● Lonely battle for women's rights. Page 33

OTTAWA (CP) — The first case in which the Canadian Bill of Rights has been used to fight discrimination against women will go to the Supreme Court of Canada, Justice Minister John Turner announced Wednesday.

Indian Affairs Minister

Jean Chretien said later "radical changes" in the administration of Indian affairs will result if the Supreme Court upholds a Federal Court decision on which the test is based.

The decision overthrows a marriage provision in the Indian Act on the grounds that it is discriminatory against women.

The Commons announcement that it will be tested in the Supreme Court was taken by Conservative spokesman as an attempt to break the Federal Court judgment.

Indians themselves have been sharply divided on whether or not women should lose their treaty rights, as is the case now, when they marry non-Indians.

Chretien was asked whether the judgment, if upheld, would have a retroactive effect on the hundreds of Indian women who have lost their equity in reserve funds, and their right to live on the reserve or be treated as treaty Indians because they have violated the marriage provision. The provision has been aimed at protecting the reserve lands from domination by non-Indians.

"What wrong has British Columbia done ... in carrying out the scheme of Confederation?" asked Douglas McKay Brown, appearing in court for the attorney-general of the province.

He is opposing an appeal by the Nishga Indians who are asking the high court for a declaration that they hold Indian title — aboriginal rights — in more than 4,000 square miles of the Nass Valley north of Prince Rupert.

Brown said the Nishga quarrel is with the federal government and that the courts had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

But Mr. Justice Emmett Hall disagreed. He said the federal government seemed to be telling the Indians first to prove their claims of aboriginal rights before talking about compensation for the lands involved.

Only after they had proved a claim to Indian title in B.C. Crown lands whose title was held by the province could they press their claims, said Hall.

The court also seemed impressed by Brown's argument that a declaration that the Nishgas owned the land in question would be of nuisance value only.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence observed that Brown should be more concerned that it could be too effective.

NDP, Grits Draw In Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — The major political parties in Saskatchewan failed to gain any ground in two byelections Wednesday.

Liberal Jack Weibe, 35, a farmer from Herbert, led all the way in Moose, a south-central riding that was made vacant when Thatcher died July 23, a month after the Liberal party was defeated.

Weibe defeated Ed Nasruden, 52, of Saskatoon, the province's Progressive Conservative party leader, and the NDP's Jim Murdoch, 39, a farmer.

In a two-way fight in Souris-Estevan, New Democrat Kim Thorson, a 39-year-old lawyer

from Estevan, defeated Liberal Ian MacDougall, a 43-year-old pipeline company executive, also of Estevan, who had held the seat before the June 23 general election.

Women's Rights Move Over

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackenzie has replaced Urban Affairs Minister Robert Andros as the government's minister responsible for women's rights.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the change resulted from recognition of the fact that the labor department handles many women's rights questions.

What Wrong Has B.C. Done?

Nishga Hearing Opens in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia is "an innocent bystander" in the aboriginal rights battle between the federal government and non-treaty Indians, the Supreme Court of Canada was told Wednesday.

What wrong has British Columbia done ... in carrying out the scheme of Confederation?" asked Douglas McKay Brown, appearing in court for the attorney-general of the province.

He is opposing an appeal by the Nishga Indians who are asking the high court for a declaration that they hold Indian title — aboriginal rights — in more than 4,000 square miles of the Nass Valley north of Prince Rupert.

By GEORGE INGLIS
Colonist Reporter

Feelings ran high as the Friends of Ireland Club launched its membership campaign in the Red Lion Inn Wednesday, and opinions were as divided as the sons and daughter of Erin were from the violent scenes in Belfast.

Club president Jim O'Sullivan of County Cork opened with a plea for formation of a good Irish club in Victoria, "one of the few cities in the western world where there isn't one."

He set the tone for debate when he made reference to "rising up to throw off the invader," and the invader "succeeding in enslaving the Catholic population by gerrymandering elections," and mentioned it was 4 a.m. in Ireland and rifle butts were crashing, jackboots stomping in the streets.

Friends of Erin Seek Members

"I don't want you to think our club is any kind of political club," he said, drawing groans from some, and laughs from others.

"Don't be stupid, man, after that speech?" Hill Wilson, a B.C. pilot whose father was a master mariner out of Belfast, said.

"It was a defence of the IRA, no more, no less," Wilson added.

O'Sullivan squelched him, saying he could bring it up at the coffee party later, but Wilson and a friend challenged his action on grounds of free speech.

with brouhaha until one man's voice raised and he addressed the meeting whimsically.

"This debate has been going on for 100 years," the unidentified spectator said. "If we solve it here tonight, then the good Lord should come down and bless us. Maybe the president did have just a flare of the south..."

"We are not trying to straighten Ireland out, let us try to help the suffering."

He was applauded and Peggy McNulty, the woman who has been promoting formation of the club, and whose brother, she said, is on a relief committee in Belfast's St.

Patrick's County, in the heart of the troubled area, agreed.

Mrs. McNulty, who came from Belfast in 1968, said she wanted to see Irishmen band together and show the people in Ireland there were some who cared, by contributing to the Green Cross fund in the club, which would send the money to St. Patrick's relief fund in Belfast.

After the meeting, over coffee, the Friends of Ireland became just friends, and the debate took on a quieter tone.

Several people made it clear they wanted no truck with Sean Kenny, the self-styled IRA representative who was in Victoria a month ago.

"We want no truck with his kind of socialist, communist, whatever," O'Sullivan said — others agreed.

Ad Complaint Nears Home

A charge against the operator of a newsstand in the legislative buildings alleging that she sold a magazine containing liquor advertisements was laid by a Vancouver businessman Wednesday.

David Bader, 37, of Vancouver, said he laid the charge after he bought the magazine Tuesday afternoon from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind newsstand.

The charge, he told the colonist, alleges that the sale of the Time magazine contravened the recent amendment to the B.C. Liquor Control Act which states persons distributing or publishing magazines or other publications containing liquor ads in the province is committing an offence.

Bader has laid two similar charges during the past three months.

The first charge was filed September in Nanaimo against B.C. Ferries general manager Monte Aldous and a newsstand vendor. Involved was a B.C. Outdoor magazine, with a liquor ad, he purchased aboard the Queen of Nanaimo Sept. 1.

He said the second charge was filed three days ago in Nanaimo against Aldous and another newsstand vendor. Involved, he said, were wine ads in a Home magazine he purchased aboard the Queen of Burnaby.

Wally Anderson, Victoria's senior prosecutor, said in a separate interview that he had been approached by Bader Wednesday about the sale. He said he referred the businessman, after a discussion, to Ted Mills, Victoria district's senior justice of the peace, to swear out the information.

Bader said that he bought the Time magazine after noticing a number of liquor ads in it. He said he obtained a receipt from the proprietor as evidence.

No date for trial on the latest charge has been set, he said.

Budget Already 'Barely Enough'

Money Lack Points To Teacher Layoff

Greater Victoria school board may be forced to lay off some teachers as early as the spring of 1972 because of a shortage of money, according to board chairman Allan McKinnon.

McKinnon told the Colonist Wednesday that the board would have to trim about $750,000 off an operating budget for 1972 that trustees had considered to be "just barely enough."

And, he said, the figure could rise substantially if an arbitration award gives district teachers a salary increase of more than the 6.5 per cent allotted in the provincial budget.

He made the comments after Education Minister Donald Brocks, on Tuesday, announced the basic education grant from the education department for 1972 — $15,190 for each instructional unit. (An instructional unit is 30 elementary or 40 high school students.)

Although the grant for each unit is up 8.3 per cent from last year, a decrease in the number of units in the Greater Victoria district means its increase is only 5.8 per cent, McKinnon said.

The amount of the basic program for Victoria totals $20,572,344, and adding on the 8 per cent a district may go over the basic program, the board may spend $22,218,123 before going to referendum.

McKinnon said he could see the board "wringing out" about $200,000 from the provincial budget by cutting it even further. The cuts would include $60,000 budgeted for new teachers in the district to try to reduce the teacher-pupil ratio which is already higher than in most B.C. districts.

It might be possible to save another $200,000 by not replacing teachers who retired or resigned during the year, he said, but even this would cause difficulties in the schools if teachers left in the middle of the year. Children would have to be moved into other classes which had already been together for at least one term.

"But where the rest of the money's going to come from, I don't know," McKinnon said. "Cutting teachers is the last possible priority. It's the last resort, but I think it's a priority we're going to have to get down to."

How many teachers might be cut and whether they would go at the end of term in June or earlier, depended upon what arbitration settlement the teachers received, he said.

He estimated that for each percentage point of increase teachers received above 6.5 per cent, another $160,000 would have to be chopped from the budget.

Brocks has previously announced that the department will share in teachers' salary increases only up to 6.5 per cent.

McKinnon said it was unlikely the board would take the operating budget to referendum because it would cost several thousand dollars just to do that, and the vote probably wouldn't be passed anyway.

The only other possible alternative, he said, was to operate the schools until they

McKinnon
"... last resort"

ran out of money in the fall and then close them down, as had been done in some American communities.

"No, it surely couldn't come to that," he said.

"We'll end up with something, but it's certainly going to cause a tremendous upheaval."

In Sooke school district, which is expanding quite rapidly, board chairman Fred Willway said the 8.3 per cent increase in the basic program for each unit "improved" the board's financial position.

The board should have little trouble staying under the 108 per cent limit unless its arbitration board's award to teachers is "out of line," he said.

Both Sides Gird For Labor Fight

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

All signs pointed Wednesday to a large-scale battle between construction unions and the contractors they have dubbed non-union.

Both sides are mustering their forces in an attempt to find whatever help they can. Contractors say they hope to officially form an association tonight as a line of defence against what they call "a campaign of coercion" by unions staging an all-out organizing drive.

They have also filed an official complaint with the B.C. Labor Relations Board, charging that the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council has used intimidation as a tactic.

The building trades council, in turn, has looked to the 60,000-member B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council and the 13,000-member Victoria Labor Council for support. The labor council pledged this support at its meeting Wednesday night. The larger group is expected to do the same today when its executive meets in Vancouver.

The battle, confined to Greater Victoria until now, threatens to spread throughout B.C.

Right now the chief target of the unions is Wigmar Construction Ltd. Pouring of cement at three Greater Victoria construction sites of the company has been halted by drivers who refuse to make deliveries. The drivers say they won't do so while non-union men are on the job.

Union leader John Schibill told the labor council meeting Wednesday that, contrary to common belief, the construction unions are not closed to newcomers, but are ready and willing to sign up any of the non-union men now on the construction sites. This, he said, was agreed to by all of the unions before the drive began.

He said it was understood that about 65 non-union contractors were forming an organization that would hire non-union help.

Spokesmen for the contractors told the Colonist their organization would defend the rights of both unionists and non-unionists and that both would be hired wherever possible.

Their claim is that the union officials are trying to force membership on men who don't want it and to tell the contractors who they can and can't hire.

Bruce Davenport, owner of Mardon Homes Ltd., said in an interview that even some of the union men on the job are unhappy with the tactics of their leaders. He said this is because they are "being pulled off the job" so often.

"If he (union member) starts on the job today, he doesn't know if he's going to be there after the coffee break," he said.

He said the contractors were meeting for the second time tonight. Davenport said upward of 60 contractors attended the first meeting and "double, maybe triple" this number have indicated willingness to join since.

Schibill, who is both vice-president of the labor council and secretary of the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, claimed at the Wednesday night meeting that some non-union contractors were bringing workers in from Alberta.

He said this was not only unfair to unemployed local people, but added up to exploitation of the Alberta people. He said they were earning only about half the wages paid union men.

Trustees, Hopefuls Air Lifetime Clause

Teachers' Tenure Sparks Debate

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Question of lifetime tenure for teachers sparked debate at an all-candidates meeting for trustees in Greater Victoria school district Wednesday night.

The meeting at Oak Bay junior high school, sponsored by Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, was attended by about 45 people.

Opponents in the tenure debate were incumbent Peter Bunn who suggested a regular five-year review of tenure for each teacher and candidate Frank Preston who said teachers should continue to have lifetime tenure, although it should be possible to dismiss incompetent teachers.

Both positions received some support from the audience.

Preston said that reviewing each teacher's tenure every so often would "leave things ripe for a witch-hunt" if administrators or a board ever wanted to engage in one.

Preston said it was important trustees did a better job of selling their product to the community and to the provincial government. They should work to reduce the alienation many citizens feel toward the educational system.

He also suggested elementary schools should be smaller to make them more human. Bunn urged greater community use of schools, more teacher aides to free highly-qualified teachers from administrative duties, and removal of school taxes from the homeowner.

He urged a campaign to get a good, modern school for the James Bay area as had been done at Victoria West and Blanshard.

Incumbent Mrs. Daphne Temple said students should have more freedom in the curriculum and there should be better programs for very young children and for those not going on to university.

Candidate Ted Robbins said his main concern was in lowering high education costs. He suggested the board might stop hiring personnel for a while and might put a temporary freeze on operating costs of schools.

Candidate Karel de Roo said students were not being taught to relate what they learned in school to real life. He said there should be a better drug education program, and teachers should not express political or religious beliefs to their pupils.

Incumbent Dr. H. A. Knight said trustees should "keep costs as low as possible, but should not sacrifice the standard of education. He supported outdoor education, a more integrated curriculum, open-area schools, and broad adult education programs.

Candidate Harry Graham said the curriculum should be relevant to the needs of today's students, particularly in the field of ecology. He suggested a number of ways in which the burden of education costs could be removed from the homeowner, among them placing a greater tax on natural resource industries.

Brain Damage Death Cause

Miss Beatrice K. Booth, 77, of 1035 Pendergast, struck by a car Friday afternoon at Cook and Rockland, died about 2½ hours later in St. Joseph's Hospital as a result of brain damage and fractures received in the mishap, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday night. The inquest continues 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Provincial Law Courts building, 800-block Burdett.
